ATWOOD LANDS IN BUFFALO ON FLIGHT TO NEW YORK

Short Run for Fifth Day of His Air Journey From St. Louis; Goes Straight Over Dunkirk and Beats His Expectations

Trip Now Half Over; Boston Aviator Says He Will Be in Rochester Tomorrow Morning; Smooth Sailing Rest of Way

BUFFALO, N. Y., August 19.—Confused by the smoke of the great steel plants Harry N. Atwood, the aviator, who is flying from St. Louis to Coney Island, made a wide detour over Buffalo before he could find the race track upon which he was scheduled to alight.

By 5 o'clock this afternoon nearly 10,000 persons had gathered at the race track to see Atwood alight. At 6 o'clock they were still there. Then the crowd, believing that Atwood had met with a mishap and would not arrive, began to dwindle. At 7:02 o'clock, when Atwood swooped down into the great oval and landed as lightly as a bird, comparatively few of the ten thousand were on the ground. The flight from Erie to Buffalo, a distance of eighty-four miles, was made in one hour and forty minutes.

Delayed By High Winds.

Atwood arrived in Erie from Swanville, Pa., where he spent the night, at 11:10 a. m. It was his intention to proceed eastward at once, but owing to the high winds he was compelled to wait, and it was 4:52 this afternoon before he started for Dunkirk, after circling over the temporary aviation field at Erie.

He passed Dunkirk depot at 5:43 and was cheered by a great crowd which had assembled in the hope of receiving him and entertaining him for the night. Ten minutes later he flashed over the little town of Silver Creek, N. Y., and at 5:57 the aviator waved his hand to a crowd at Irving, only twenty-eight miles from Buffalo.

Makes a Great Descent.

At 6.13 he had covered the eight miles between the two places in six minutes. The last ten miles of the journey from Lake View to Seneca, the intrepid flyer covered in twelve minutes and made a fine descent in an open field at 6:25. In a little while he was coming into the city.

Up until to-night Atwood has flown 802 miles since leaving St. Louis in 17 hours and 43 minutes. The distance from Buffalo to New York is 460 miles. Atwood is confident that his air craft will sink to earth at Coney Island late Monday night or some time Tuesday.

At three o'clock to-morrow afternoon Atwood leaves to fly to Syracuse. On Monday he will attempt to reach Albany. At Albany he will equipt his craft with pontoons for the flight down the Hudson to New York.

Atwood is not prepared to-night to say whether he will continue his flight from New York to Boston or will send the machine on by express and follow it by train.

"At times," the aviator said to the American correspondent, "I feel like resting content with the flight from St. Louis to Coney Island, which, for some time to come at least, is likely to remain as the long distance record for the United States. Again, I am prompted by my love for Boston and New England to push on to the Massachusetts coast and report with my 'ship' at the aviation field in Squantum. I may do so."

OVINGTON FALLS AT CHICAGO MEET; SMASHES AIRSHIP

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—Fully 750,000 persons, the largest crowd of the week, saw the opening of the great international aviation meet's eighth day, and the greatest contests of the week were expected.

Philip Parmelee becomes favored bookie for altitude in this meet. It was officially announced at 3 o'clock that through an error in calculations, the result of Brindley's flight yesterday, which was believed to have broken the world's altitude record, should be 5,708 feet instead of 11,726 feet.

Earl Ovington wrecked his machine to-day, smashing the lower planes, and came down with a crash from a few feet over the top of the south centre pylon, but he was not injured.

MUSICIANS IN A FIGHT.

One of Creatore's Band Players Stabbed in the Arm.

Two members of Creatore's band, entered into an altercation last night in which John Facci of Brooklyn, one of the belligerents, received a knife wound to the right arm that had to be treated at the city Hospital. The man charged with inflicting the wound is Michael Pitti.

The altercation started in the early evening at the American League baseball park, before the audience gathered for the concert.

ATWOOD IS TO FLY FOR HEARST PRIZE ACROSS CONTINENT

BUFFALO, Aug. 19.—"I have determined to start on the flight across the American continent for the $50,000 prize offered by William Randolph Hearst on October 1st," said Harry N. Atwood to-night. "This flight which I undertook to prove to myself that I can make the flight for the Hearst prize has been of inestimable value to me. I have not attempted to do my speed flying and I have simply loafed along through the air.

"If I had really set out to go to New York in a hurry I think I could have made the flight easily in four days.

"When you take into consideration the distance I have just flown you can readily understand that it will be exceedingly easy to make 3,500 miles from coast to coast in thirty days. I intend to start for the Hearst prize from Los Angeles. I plan to take the southern route until I strike St. Louis. Then I will retrace the journey I am now making."

Riley Takes a Shot at Loole and Two Rivals

Republican Candidates Shy an Fighting Qualities, Says Man From Malden.

Thomas F. Riley of Malden, former Representative and prospective candidate for Mayor, shot a few yesterday at the Republican aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination. This is how Mr. Riley sizes them up:

"Whichever of the Republicans gets his party's nomination, there will be no fight. None of the three is a fighter.

"Walker would want to arbitrate, to avoid a battle.

"Norman White, inside of three days, would bite himself and die of political hydrophobia.

"Prothingham, poor Loole, if he got three miles from a elm skirt and a pink tea, would climb a tree so high that you couldn't reach him with grape shot implements."

Whereat there was much uproarious laughter, by Democrats.

Mr. Riley made his speech in the pine grove at Tuck's Point, West Manchester, the occasion being the send-off outing of the Essex County Democratic Club. Chairman Frank A. Foster of the Manchester Town Committee and President George H. Sheedy of the County Club did the honors.

Other speakers on the bill included Chairman McDonald of the State Committee, William H. O'Brien, David I. Walsh, Frank C. Richardson, who predicts Foss by 50,000, Mayor Cahill of Lawrence, Edward O. Skelton and Frank Donahue, rival candidates for Secretary of State, Michael L. Sullivan, George Schofield, General Stopford, Charles B. Smith, and Charles B. Strecker. There was also an excellent clambake.

These officers were elected: President, George H. Sheedy of Salem; vice presidents, Michael F. Phelan of Lynn, and General William Stopford of Beverly; secretary, John F. Williams of Marblehead; treasurer, Charles N. Perley of Danvers.

VAUDEVILLE PARROT.

Billy's His Name. He Claims So Himself—Officer!

Lynn police have a vaudeville parrot on their hands. He is a monologist. His line of talk is very choppy, also very impudent.

"Billy" is his name. He says so himself.

The parrot is a cross, crabbed cuss at times. When he feels like a "sq. C. C." he squawks: "Cheese it! You old baldhead!" He yelled this at Chief Burkes and the plain cops enjoyed it hugely.

The bird is kept in one of the cells. He rickles the regular prisoners. Being under arrest isn't half so tame in Lynn as it was before the parrot arrived. The cops secured the parrot from the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Maguire, who was found dead at No. 4 Rockway street.

MISS SEARS AT NEWPORT.

Boston Girl and Harold Vanderbilt Motor From North Shore.

NEWPORT, Aug. 19.—Miss Eleonora Sears and Harold S. Vanderbilt returned by automobile this afternoon from the North Shore, where they have been spending the week at the summer home of the Sears family. On their return here they went direct to Marble House, the residence of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mr. Vanderbilt's mother. Mrs. Belmont gave a dinner in Miss Sears' honor at 8 o'clock.

Later in the evening Miss Sears and Mr. Vanderbilt went to the ball given by Mrs. E. J. Berwind at "The Elms." It is expected that Miss Sears will figure prominently in the tennis tournament which begins on the Casino courts Monday.

De Mar Wins Marathon.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 19.—Clarence DeMar, winner of last Boston Marathon, won the ten-mile Marathon at the Forester's field day this afternoon. Pigotts of Brookline Gymnasium won second place, Ahlgren of the Swedish Gym Club of Boston third and Devine, Manchester amateur champion, fourth.

WALKER URGES GRAND TRUNK FOR BOSTON

Favors Move by State to Provide Best Dock Facilities and Privileges.

The most important development of the week in the Boston AMERICAN campaign to bring the Grand Trunk Railway to Boston was the enlistment of the Hon. Joseph Walker of Brookline, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

"I believe," Speaker Walker said yesterday, "that the introduction into Boston of an independent railroad system like the Grand Trunk would be a most beneficial thing for the Commonwealth.

"If elected Governor I shall do all in my power to encourage this project."

Speaker Walker is one of the three Republican aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination. One of the others, Representative White of Brookline, vies with Governor Foss in the earnestness of his advocacy of the Grand Trunk.

When Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham gets around to getting his position it is likely that the Grand Trunk, as an issue, will be taken out of politics in the approaching campaign.

Means Public Benefit.

Speaker Walker came out for the Grand Trunk unequivocally. He said:

"Competition between the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Grand Trunk would result only in the interest of the general public.

"I believe that the State should encourage the Grand Trunk to come to Boston, and to do this it should provide fair road with the best dock facilities and privileges.

"It has been a question for some time whether New England can be better served by one railroad system or by many and it has been the policy of Massachusetts of late to permit consolidation of railroads, believing that greater economy and efficiency and therefore lower rates to the shipper could be obtained with a few railroad lines rather than the many. This policy, however, should not and has not been intended to allow a railroad monopoly in Massachusetts, and the introduction of the Grand Trunk should be welcomed by those who have supported this policy.

Must Serve the People.

"I believe that where competition is practicable it is infinitely better than a regulated monopoly, but that where competition is impracticable regulation should take its place.

"I do not believe it is in the public interest to stack public service corporations for political purposes. As the State's representatives we should see that the public service corporations serve the public, but we should give them every encouragement to develop their systems for the good of all."

HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Two Women Injured When Machines Meet Head-on.

WILMINGTON, Aug. 19.—Two women were injured, and half a dozen men were badly shaken up when two automobiles crashed at the State highway and Lowell street, to-day. The injured are Mrs. Goldthwaite, wife of a Lynn druggist, whose teeth were broken and face lacerated, and a daughter of John Brown of Littleton, who suffered a bruised knee.

One automobile was owned by Theodore Perear of No. 165 Washington street, Lynn. His son, Charles, was driving, and he and his wife had as their guests in the car, Dr. and Mrs. Goldthwaite. In the other machine were Frank F. Hathaway of Wilmington, John Brown of Littleton, and Miss Brown. Hathaway owned the car. The two autos had a head-on collision.

MRS. SANDS HAS FALL.

Newport Woman Breaks Paris Parasol, But Is Unhurt.

NEWPORT, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Austin L. Sands, the bride of a year of Austin L. Sands, gentleman farmer, of New Hamburg, N. Y., had a fall here to-day. In front of Hollander's store, on Bellevue avenue, she attempted to alight from her automobile. Her foot slipped, or perhaps because encumbered in her gown. At any rate the lady fell, fracturing the ivory handle of her new Parisian parasol. She managed to walk to a nearby drug store, where stimulants were administered. Mrs. Sands was Miss Marianna Fulham, daughter of Commander William F. Fulham of the United States Navy.

Miss Draper to Wed in Fall

Prefers Cooking to Society

Daughter of Former Governor and Thomas B. Gannett, Jr., Will Wed.

DOROTHY DRAPER

MISS DOROTHY DRAPER

FORMER Governor and Mrs. Eben S. Draper of Hopedale and No. 150 Beacon street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy, to Thomas B. Gannett, Jr., of Cambridge, a member of the banking firm of Parkinson & Burr, No. 29 Exchange building. State street, and a graduate of Harvard, class of 1897. The wedding will take place in the early Fall.

Miss Draper is a member of the Vincent Club and was one of the few debutantes that were asked to take part in the annual Spring show of the club.

She was one of the most feted and most talked of debutantes last Summer. Her coming out party in June, 1910, at the Somerset was the largest of that season.

Miss Draper has traveled much with her father, touring Europe, spending some time in Paris and in London, and recently made a trip to the Far West and Alaska.

She's a Good Cook.

Miss Draper has prepared for housekeeping, having taken a course in a cooking school. Using her own words: "Every girl ought to know how to cook and how to cook well, and how to build a fire," she prefers cooking to society.

Of an athletic trend of mind, she has become expert at tennis and golf and enjoys riding and driving. While passing a Summer vacation in the White Mountains with Governor and Mrs. Draper in 1905, Miss Draper was pitcher of the Profile House baseball team against teams composed of prominent Summer society women that were summering there.

Both she and her fiance are fond of golf and have been much together on the links of Essex county and the North Shore. Mr. Gannett captained the Harvard golf team in 1896-7, when it was badly beaten by Yale.

Mr. Gannett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gannett of Channing place, Cambridge. His time is devoted almost entirely to the interests of his banking firm, although in the Summer he spends his spare time at the Essex Country Club, the Myopia and Oakley clubs. His father is a director in the Revere Sugar Refining Company and was for years connected with the firm of Nash, Spaulding & Co.

Harvard Holds His Interest.

Mr. Gannett was graduated in the class of 1897 with such well known men as William L. Garrison, Jr., and "Buck" Hallowell and has been one of the moving spirits in the class affairs ever since. He is a member of the Union, Tennis and Racquet, Country, Myopia, and Oakley clubs of this city; the Harvard club of New York and University club of Chicago. He was captain two years of the Harvard Golf Club and was chairman of his class committee at his graduation. He is thirty-five years old.

U. S. CONSUL GRACEY SUICIDE IN NEWTON

Methodist Minister, Long in Service in China, Ends Life in Sanitarium.

The Rev. Samuel L. Gracey, United States consul at Foochow, China, for the past twenty years, committed suicide yesterday afternoon in a West Newton sanitarium by cutting his throat with a razor belonging to one of the attendants. He was prominent in the Methodist ministry in Massachusetts before he went to China. He had been in the sanitarium a few weeks to recover from head-down caused by work and old age. He was seventy-six. His dead was discovered soon after it was committed.

Mr. Gracey was not under restraint in the sanitarium, as he had shown no indications of suicidal or other violent mania. Mrs. Gracey arrived at the sanitarium last night from her former home in Middletown, where she has been staying since her husband returned from China. The body will be taken to Philadelphia for burial.

Mr. Gracey came home from China two months ago, accompanied by one of his sons, Wilbur T. Gracey, U. S. consul at Nankin, China. He went willingly to the sanitarium for a rest. He was apparently in good spirits until then, and only yesterday morning seemed unusually cheerful.

The Rev. Samuel L. Gracey was born in Philadelphia in 1835. He was graduated from Boston University Theological School in 1858 and was ordained to the Methodist ministry the same year. He filled pastorates for the next thirty years in Philadelphia, Smyrna, Del., Boston, Cambridge, Westfield, Fall River, Chelsea, Salem, Natick, East Weymouth and Lynn. When he was in Salem he ran for the Legislature on the Republican ticket and was twice elected Representative from his Essex District.

In 1862 he enlisted as a private in the Sixteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry. He served three years under General Phil Sheridan in the Army of the Potomac.

In 1869, two years after he was ordained to the ministry, he married Miss Leonora Thompson of Philadelphia, who died in 1907. Two of their children were destined to follow their father in the China consular service. In 1890, three years after his first wife died, he married Miss Carrie E. Pratt of Middleboro.

Wilbur Tirrell Gracey, one of his sons, is United States Consul at Nankin on a salary of $4,000. Another son, Spencer F. Gracey, has been Vice-Consul at Foochow under the father.

GREAT BRITISH LABOR WAR ENDED; STRIKERS WIN ARBITRATION

1800 Branches of Railway Unions Notified That "All Men Must Return to Work Immediately"—Sudden and Drastic Ending to a Strike That Paralyzed Trade and Threatened Starvation.

Whether Leaders Can Control Their Men and Send Them Back Pending Negotiations is Yet to Be Seen—Royal Commission to Be Appointed to Consider Higher Wages—Wales Riots Continue.

By JOHN L. EDDY.

Special London Correspondent of the Sunday American

LONDON, Aug. 20—The joint committee has settled the strike. Victory for trades unionism. All men must return to work immediately.

The foregoing telegram dispatched at 12:40 this morning to the 1,800 branches of the railway unions throughout the country tells the story of a sudden and dramatic ending to Britain's spectacular strike.

Whether leaders can now control their men and set them back to work remains to be seen. It is a significant fact that in the agreement signed to-night the leaders pledge themselves merely to "use their best endeavor to induce the men to return to work at once."

The leaders on both sides who signed the agreement realized that the strike fever which has gripped the country has become so violent that even those who had called it forth might be unable to allay it.

TO ABIDE BY DECISION OF BOARD.

Under the agreement the railroads are supposed to take back all the strikers without prejudice. A conciliation board, in which the men will be represented equally with the railroads, is to be appointed, both parties pledging themselves to abide by its decision. A royal commission is to be appointed by the government to inquire into the men's right to higher wages.

The final paragraph of the government announcement of the appointment of this commission clearly indicates that higher wages will be granted.

"The government pledges itself to propose to Parliament that, owing to the increase of the cost of labor, there will be a legal reason for an increase in the charges to the general public."

Meanwhile, as if to prove that the trouble is not yet over, despite the agreement, the following bulletin comes in from Llanelly, in Wales, where earlier in the day troops fired on the mob, killing two men.

"Rioting renewed, terrible scenes enacted, freight shed fired, cars burned, explosion occurred, many people killed and injured."

From the very first the strikers have declared they would trust Lloyd George and Lloyd George only, as the representative executive of the government in any attempt to reach a settlement and when it was announced that Premier Asquith had handed over the complete conduct of negotiations to the Chancellor, the feeling soon grew strongly in labor circles that the basis of a fair arrangement would speedily be reached.

It is said that the men will insist that the Chancellor shall head the royal commission, as they believe he will more fairly represent them than anyone in the government service.

TERMS OF THE STRIKE AGREEMENT

The terms of the agreement follow:

1—The strike to be terminated forthwith and the men to return to work at once.

2—All the men involved by the present dispute, either by strike or lockout, including recruits who present themselves for work within a reasonable time to be reinstated by the companies at the earliest possible moment and no one to be victimized in proceedings for breach of contract or otherwise penalized.

3—Conciliation boards to be constituted for the purpose of settling forthwith all questions at present in dispute as far as they are within the scope of such boards, provided notice of such questions be given not later than fourteen days from the date of this agreement. If the sectional boards fail to arrive at a settlement the central board is to meet at once. Any decisions arrived at are to be retrospective from the date of this agreement. It is agreed for the purpose of this and the following clause that rates of wages include remuneration, whether by time or piecework.

Commission of Five.

4—Steps are to be taken forthwith to effect a settlement of questions now in dispute between companies and unions of such employees included within the conciliation scheme of 1907 by means of conferences between representatives of companies and failing of an agreement by arbitration they are to be arranged mutually or by the Board of Trade. The above is to be a temporary arrangement pending a report of the commission as to the best means for settling disputes.

5—Both parties are to give every assistance to the special commission of inquiry, the immediate appointment of which the government has announced.

6—Any questions which may arise as to the interpretation of this agreement are to be referred to the Board of Trade.

The agreement was signed by all present at the conference. The special commission will consist of five members, including Representatives of employers and workmen in equal numbers and an impartial chairman. The names of the commissioners will be announced next Tuesday and the commission will immediately proceed with the inquiry.

Assurances have been given by both parties to the agreement that they will accept the findings of the commission and the government has assured the railway companies that it will propose to parliament next session legislation providing that increase in the cost of labor due to improvement of conditions of the railways will be valid justification for a reasonable increase in charges within the legal maximum.

Notable Travellers Stranded.

There was a scramble on the part of Americans to-day to get to steamships that would take them home.

Many of the prominent transatlantic lines posted notices that passengers would have to make their way to Liverpool as best they could.

No regular passenger lists could be made up, but passengers were assured if they could get aboard the ships there would be a fair chance of getting back to America.

Prices for surrendered cabins on German liners and other steamships sailing from unbeleaguered ports, reached fabulous heights during the day. One room on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, sailing next Wednesday, is quoted at $1,000. The Deutschland, advised passengers to start for Southampton immediately in order to make sure of getting there.

James R. Keene, who was booked on the Lusitania, was wandering around be-day among the ship offices like a lost soul seeking some way of escape. Justus Miles Forman, the author, gave up in disgust and decided to wait. Constant Coiller and her husband, Julius Lestrange, postponed their new to "Thais." Richard Croker, Jr., arrived in London, having spent fifty hours in coming from Ireland to meet his sister and take her back to visit their nine hours.

The strike seriously affected industries in many parts of the country, particularly in the North. Cotton mills all over Lancashire were closing owing to a lack of supplies. The strike had paralyzed the iron, steel and coal industries of West Cumberland, where factories were turning out a daily output of 12,000 tons ceased work to-day. About 12,000 men are idle there to-day.

Wales Industries Tied Up.

The strike seriously affects trade throughout North Wales. Work had ceased in collieries, iron works and tinplate yards were idle owing to the nonshipment of goods to England. A large Belfast linen establishment put many of its hand idlers on short notice to-day. The workers on short notice to-day. The workers on short notice to-day. The work

BAPTIST MINISTER WOULD MARRY ASTOR

Connecticut Pastor Thinks Critics of the Colonel "Degraded Calling."

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19.—The Rev. Dewitt T. Vanderer, a Baptist clergyman, to-day declared that he would be perfectly willing to officiate at the wedding of Colonel John Jacob Astor and Miss Force if called upon to do so. He said that Dr. Richmond and other divines who have condemned the match have "degraded their calling" by their utterances. The Rev. Mr. Vanderer has a charge at South Norwalk, Ct.

Miss Madeleine Force, fiancee of Colonel Astor, was not only the heroine of a romance but of a shipwreck when she arrived here on his yacht Noma from New York today.

At midnight, while the Noma was broaching a gale Captain William Roberts heard a faint hail for help over the water. The appeal came from the crew of the fifty-two foot auxiliary sloop Zingari, which was sinking in Long Island Sound, about twelve miles off Martin's Point. There were five despairing yachtsmen aboard. Their launch was helpless, and if they had to abandon the sloop their only hope for life was a frail skiff. The wind was blowing wildly from the northwest, and the waves raced by like liquid hills.

Astor Directs Work.

Miss Force was as excited a girl as is often seen on shipboard when she heard that there were enthusiastic shouts of applause and applauded her millionaire fiance when he superintended the rescue. She stood at the searching wind and the dashing spray to see the Noma's lifeboat pitch and toss on its errand of mercy.

"Ship ahoy! For God's sake help us—we are sinking!" was the hoarse cry heard by Captain Roberts. He sent one of the crew below to notify Colonel Astor. When the owner of the Noma came on deck he took command at once.

The castaway yachtsmen were exhausted and Colonel Astor personally saw that they were given stimulants and provided with comfortable berths aboard the potash-ing Noma for the night.

The rescued men are Captain Lester Bauer of New York, James S. Munn of Brooklyn, William Humphrey of Garden City, L. I., Herbert Hamlin, who lives in the Bronx, and James McDonough, whose home is on Staten Island.

Ready for Long Cruise.

When the yacht Noma reached here today Colonel Astor was met at the dock by one of his automobiles. He was the only one to go ashore. In his car he motored to his villa at Beachwood. He was at the house but a short time picking up his belongings.

Mr. and Mrs. Force, the parents of the bride-to-be of Colonel Astor, were on board with Miss Force, and it was rumored that the coming marriage would take place at some port while the yacht was on this cruise. It is not known where the yacht will touch, but it was rumored that it is bound for the Mediterranean. Another report was that the vessel is bound for the Caribbean along the coast of Maine and the provinces. It is known that the yacht is not out with provisions to last several months.

ROUT PANAMA CROCODILES.

Two, Millions of Years Old, Add Much to Scientific Data.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 19.—Workmen on the Panama Canal have encountered two fifteen-foot crocodiles, the first that have been seen in that part of America for many generations, and each is between three and four million years old, with seven full sets of teeth on the upper front out of their hiding place about ten years ago by a steam shovel working in the Culebra Cut and are now on their way to the National Museum at Washington with much of the earth and rock crust of ages knocked off their bodies.

The discovery of these relics of a past geological era is important from a scientific standpoint, and is regarded as an important link in the theory that the common Florida "gator" and the crocodile of the Nile and Ganges are blood relatives.

LILLIAN McCABE, WHO WAS RESCUED OFF NEPONSET PIER

Dorchester girl was playing about scharf with tiny companions and was rescued by the timely dive of a passing citizen after she had fallen into the water.

SAVES GIRL OF FIVE BY A DARING DIVE

It isn't very clear to five-year-old Lillian McCabe, of No. 478 Neponset avenue, Dorchester, even now, how it all happened. She remembers dabbling her feet in the cool water, and then she lost her balance and fell till something caught her and wouldn't let her breathe. The next thing she knew, a man was pressing his knee on her body and moving her little arms about, and her chest was hurting. Her mother carried her home and cried over her, wrapped her in a blanket and gave her things to eat and put something hot on her feet, and pretty soon she was all right.

Lillian was playing with her sister Catherine, a year younger than herself, and a little boy, Albert Gilmartin. They wandered to the Frost Coal Company's Wharf at Neponset, and there the water, so near, tempted them to dip their feet. They climbed down to a stringer, and Lillian fell in. But for a heroic rescue by George Beebe she would have been drowned. She was unconscious when rescued, and Mr. George Littlefield worked over her for half an hour.

Passengers on a Quincy car saw her fall. Beebe sprang off, and raced for the spot where the little girl disappeared. When he got to the edge of the wharf, only the hands, clutching at nothing, were in sight. Below, in the dark water, there was a white shape, and as the child struggled, her body came to the surface a little. He dived in, and soon got her back to the pier.

Old Friend of Boston Police Is Arrested in New Bedford.

Joseph E. Silva, an old friend of the police, was arrested by Inspectors Conboy and Pierce in New Bedford yesterday, charged with the larceny of a $300 motor boat from the auto establishment of Ralph S. Boyd, at No. 27 Stanhope street. Following the theft, the man was traced to Fairhaven, where it was found a license to run a motor boat had been granted by the Highway Commission to a man of his description.

Silva is only twenty-five, but he has a police and court record dating back fifteen years. He has served in State Prison, the House of Correction, the Concord Reformatory and the Lyman School for Boys.

KILEY SEES HOME RULE.

Ex-President of Council Back From Visit in Ireland.

Daniel J. Kiley, former president of the Boston Common Council, returned to Boston yesterday after a six weeks' tour in England, Ireland and France. He was present in Parliament at the debate on the Parliament bill. He heard speeches on the bill from Premier Asquith and Mr. Balfour in the House of Commons, and from Lord Lansdowne and Lord Morley in the upper House.

Speaking about Ireland, Mr. Kiley said: "I predict that within, a short time we shall see home rule and the accompanying era of happiness for Ireland."

MUST REMAIN OUT OF HELLEN.

Conductors to File List of Passenger Business.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., August 19.—In order to get a line on the Summer business of the passenger department, President Mellen has issued orders that the conductors on the Boston & Maine system for two weeks return to the department a complete account of the business during that period. Many of the trains which are not paying are expected to come off before the usual change of time in October.

JAMES F. O'NEILL DEAD.

Cambridgeport Man Prominent as Knight of Columbus.

James F. O'Neil, prominent among the Knights of Columbus, died suddenly at his home No. 4 Union street, Cambridgeport, of heart failure yesterday. He was born in Eastport, Me., forty-one years ago, but lived in Cambridge the greater part of his life. # HARVARD INSTRUCTOR DEAD IN BALTIMORE

A dispatch from Baltimore states that Professor Thomas Hall, instructor in English in Harvard College, died in John Hopkins Hospital there, late yesterday afternoon. He was forty-two years old and had been an instructor at Harvard for a number of years.

An operation had been performed for an ailment of the head by Dr. Harvey Cushing, chief surgeon of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, in Baltimore, and the operation was made on the advice of the Hall family physicians. It is said that pneumonia set in, which weakened Professor Hall to such an extent that death was hastened.

Professor Hall was born in Boston. He was the son of Dr. Thomas H. Hall, for many years one of the staff of the Boston City Hospital. He was a member of the Harvard Club of New York and the Massachusetts Association. He was prepared at the Noble and Greenough School and graduated from Harvard in 1893.

For many years he resided at No. 40 West Newton street, Boston. Recently he purchased a home in Sparhawk street, Cambridge, which he had never occupied. Their body will be brought to Boston on the Colonial express, reaching here to-night.

Judge Richardson Rests Easy.

ORFORD, N. H., Aug. 19.—Judge James B. Richardson of the Massachusetts Superior Court was resting easily at his summer home here late to-night. Those at his bedside said that the justice was weak but was not unconscious as some reports had stated.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

COUNTESS GRANARD DINED AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Ogden Mills gave a dinner at Ocean View tonight in honor of the Earl and Countess of Granard. The Countess is Mrs. Mills's daughter, formerly Miss Beatrice Mills.

Monday night Mrs. Clarence W. Dana will entertain fifty-three guests at dinner, followed by a dance at the Newport Golf Club.

Mrs. Pembroke Jones gave a dinner at Sherwood House to-night.

MAN IS A PRISONER UNDER CAR TRUCKS

Former Representative Hugh H. O'Rourke of Worcester, who has been a prominent figure in the Massachusetts legislature for eight years for a law compelling street railways to equip their cars with lifting jacks, to extend one of his personal embarrassments last night in Boston's South End, when an unidentified man was imprisoned for several minutes under the great trucks of a trolley car.

The man was knocked down at Dover and Washington streets by a Fields Corner car. There were between two and three hundred men in the neighborhood. They got together and screwed a lifting jack in front of the car pushing him out. The man was then lifted and carried away from wheels almost under the body.

At the police hospital the man's skull was found to be fractured. The surgeons said he probably would die. He is about sixty-five years old, five feet five inches tall, and weighs about 150 pounds. There was nothing in his pockets by which he could be identified. It is known at No. 28 Reed street, Dorchester, the last address he gave to the police pending an investigation.

Guests Regaled With Grammar and Drinks

Erudite Waiter Serves One Portion of Correct English, You Know.

This college graduate who used to be a guard on the Elevated, in New York and who likewise carried a three dollar purse with him, is waiting at the Hotel Essex, newspapers.

There were ten of dinner napkins at the Essex yesterday. They had something to talk about. The Taft return from the presentation of the Rosters, the Sullivan-Marlowa nuptials and other things of the kind.

Then called the waiter.

"Bring me the same," said the next one.

"And I'll have the same over here," said the second.

The intellectual waiter brightened perceptibly. "Two, he said, "same as three similar."

He brought them soon the same and then stopped a passing waiter.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS THREATENS WOBURN

Alarm prevailed from the name of disease in Woburn yesterday when it was announced that Dr. Theophilus Wesley Richardson afternoon in Pump Street, Woburn, and that Dr. John F. Carroll also of Woburn, had pronounced the disease to be infantile paralysis. Dr. Richardson is one of the leading physicians of the Woburn district and Dr. John F. Carroll also is a practicing physician of Woburn. Both physicians have had many years' experience in the treatment of diseases and their diagnosis of the disease in the case of the child of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ward, of Pump Street, Woburn, was accepted by the health authorities as correct. Dr. Richardson was called in consultation by Dr. Carroll, who was in charge of the case from the beginning of the illness of the child.

The child was taken ill on Wednesday, August 9, and Dr. Carroll was called in. He found that the child had a temperature of 103 degrees. Dr. Carroll was in charge of the case until Friday afternoon, when Dr. Richardson was called in consultation. Dr. Richardson found that the child had a temperature of 104 degrees. Dr. Richardson was in charge of the case from Friday afternoon until Sunday afternoon, when he pronounced the disease to be infantile paralysis.

Dr. Richardson was seen at his home on Pleasant street last night and he said that he had been in charge of the case from Friday afternoon until Sunday afternoon, when he pronounced the disease to be infantile paralysis. He said that the child was very ill and that the disease was a very serious one.

Dr. Richardson said that the child was very ill and that the disease was a very serious one.

Mrs. Julia French Geraghty's Life Story

Her Young Life Bored By the Idle Rich

Tells of Important Events Happening in Her Early Days.

THE third chapter of Mrs. Julia French Geraghty's life story is now given to the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN. It is a simple, straightforward recital of the girlhood of a member of the American aristocracy. A girl in any home, at the most impressionable and inexperienced stage of a woman's development, Julia French Geraghty stood back from the edge of the whirlpool of "Society" and watched it thoughtfully with an eye keenly discriminating between the true and the false. Julia French Geraghty is a most unusual young woman.

No memoirs of Marie Bashkirtseff nor any other famous woman give a more fascinating glimpse of the psychology of that most complex of all creatures a woman.

MRS. GERAGHTY'S LIFE STORY.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner.

By JULIA FRENCH GERAGHTY.

CHAPTER III.

Bored by the Idle Rich.

I was fifteen when my sister Pauline was married and that same year my brother Francis entered Harvard, which left me the oldest daughter and the oldest child at home. Of course then I came in for more grown up life than I had before, and I did not care much for what I saw of it.

Society life is very empty and superficial. The women only care for having expensive dresses and giving more elaborate parties, and having more men trailing around after them than any other woman. Marriage is only a matter of convenience. Once they are married a man and woman don't pay any more attention to each other. Go out on the avenue or the drive any afternoon and you will never see a woman driving with her own husband.

Then they care so much about this thing they call position. They have their little set and nobody doesn't belong to that inner set is good enough to speak to. They are proud of the fact that Newport is the hardest place to break into socially that there is and they try to keep it so. Mrs. Biddle and Mrs. Gillette and Aunt Elsie and a few others let up there and say who shall not be in. Of course Aunt Elsie isn't nearly as bad as the rest of them, because she is always pleasant to everybody. But I can't feel the way they do about rank and class. It isn't a man's position that makes him interesting but what he is and does. As for those little society fads that crop up over there in Newport, I just can't stand them.

Of course, there were some things that I couldn't escape, such as standing for hours to be fitted with a lot of new dresses that I didn't want and didn't need. And then I'd have to go to silly parties of the younger set, and learn to play bridge and other polite accomplishments. But the formality of it bored me terribly. It used to make me nervous to go to the theatre, and have her ushered upstairs to dress and find a maid waiting for me to put my stockings and slippers on for me. I would say:

"Now you go back to your room and stay there until I get through, and then you can come back and put things away."

I didn't mind her putting my room in order for me and doing my mending, but I hated to have her help me dress, as though I could not do it myself.

Then there were always so many people that I must not know and could not talk to; I used to hate that. I loved to go downtown with the housekeeper and watch her do the ordering and then "shop to talk to the grocer and the butcher, because they lived such different sorts of lives that they saw things entirely differently and it made what they said more interesting to me. I liked to find out about how the people did their business, and where he bought things, and all these details of running a grocery store. But I wasn't allowed to talk to such people, except when we were up in Chester, and I think that is the reasons that I enjoyed going to Chester so much.

At Old Amos Tuck's Place.

My father has a beautiful place of about 600 acres in Chester, N. H. It has been in the family for over 200 years—used to belong to old Amos Tuck. So the people around there still call it as though we belonged to them and are very exclusive to us. It is very like really going home to get back there and where all the people are the whole family is different up there. They are friendly with you there and don't object to my talking to the help, too.

We lived very simply in Chester, only taking about five or six servants, and visiting and entertaining little. We all used to go down to the village stores and talk to everybody we came to, and I just love that sort of thing. I like being friendly with everyone because then you find out lots of things that wouldn't come into a city life at all.

So it was always great fun to go down to the store, and the old farmers would come in, and sit around on barrels and boxes and chew straws and tell about their crops, and a son who had gone to the city, and perhaps got a job as street car conductor or something. We would hear all the latest news about all of them. And we sat around on barrels and boxes too, and sometimes they asked us questions, or asked our opinion, and then we would join in and say what we thought just like the other people. They are always awfully nice to us, but they treat us in my particular deference, and that is what I like.

All At Home for Meals.

Then we have so much more family life up there. We haven't any neighbors that we see much of, except when we just casually meet them, like down in the village, and that leaves us all to ourselves most of the time. So there isn't any rush of dinner engagements and parties and balls, and carriages and autos whizzing up in front of the house to take one to some where and another somewhere else.

We sit around on the broad verandas, and are all together at meals, and then we gather for afternoon tea, and again in the evening we all sit around and talk, and perhaps some one reads aloud and we all get acquainted.

And then I love the place itself, of course most of it is not under cultivation, just wild woodland, but it is all beautiful.

There are several houses on the estate. Pauline has one and I have another. They really belong to us, and we can do anything we like with them. I used to go over in mine and pretend to keep house, and invite the others to come and visit me. But generally I used to stay up at the big house with father and mother because it was such fun to have the family all together.

But unfortunately we could not stay in Chester all the year and then it was back to Newport and Society again. I hated the latter when I got in it, for there was a certain amount of bridge parties that just had to be sat through, and afternoon tea where everybody would sit and talk gossip and clothes. I used to get so nervous that I thought I should fly away.

Just Hates to Sit Still.

I hate to sit still unless I am doing something I am interested in, and there's scarcely anything that people do in houses that really interests me. Of course there were some comforts about growing up. I didn't have to go to school any more and that was a great relief. I had my horses and dogs and could show them every year, and that was really my only fun. I didn't travel at all. My brother Francis went over to France one Summer on vacation to visit Grandmother French, who has a home in Cannes. I was always going, but never went. Francis has only gone abroad, but he had spendicitis during his freshman year at college and that made a big excitement.

The attack came on late one night. He was rushed down to Newport the next afternoon, and operated on before father could get up from New York. But after that he recovered beautifully, and we used to go over to see him and read to him, and take him fruit and things.

Along about this time I began to want an automobile of my own. I wanted a big touring car to drive around myself, but mother thought it would be much nicer for me to have a little electric runabout. And it was in one of the very electric runabouts that mother herself suggested that my Prince Charming entered my life.

To Be Continued Monday.

"JACK" GERAGHTY ILL AND HEIRESS BRIDE IS PLAYING NURSE

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 19.—Ill in bed, his society bride tenderly nursing him, "Jack" Geraghty, the Newport chauffeur whose sensational elopement and flight to this city with Julia French created more turmoil in high society circles than any other event in years, except the announcement of the Astor-Force nuptials, to-day refuses to see any callers.

"Jack has a terrible cold," Mrs. Geraghty said, in response to questions as to his condition.

Who is taking care of him?" she was asked.

"Why, who should, if not I?" was the reply, with a smile.

To all questions relating to the plans of the elopers, Mrs. Geraghty declines to answer. She seems to be perfectly contented to stay at the home of Joseph Harris, Jack's cousin, in Pine street, nursing her husband and letting the future take care of itself.

Dr. I. R. Calkins, one of the best known physicians and surgeons in the city, is attending Geraghty. Dr. Calkins says the sloping chauffeur is much aggravated by high nervous tension as a result of his experiences of the last few weeks, but that his illness is by no means serious.

Another Springfield physician, probably adviser, offers of positions and one thing and another, but Geraghty declines to engagements to-day, but no attention was paid to them. Mrs. Geraghty says she will buy taking care of "Jack" to bother with mail.

BROTHER OF CONNIE MACK INVITES THE GERAGHTYS TO HOTEL.

WORCESTER, Aug. 19.—Julia French Geraghty and her young man can stop worrying about the flight accounts of the Casino and Bellevue avenue, for the Geraghtys will never want while there's a side of beef in the larder of the Frank Elm Square House.

Proprietor Thomas J. McGillivady of the Franklin sat in the office of his hotel this evening just after the lights were turned on. He appeared to be in gloom. Everybody thought he had received bad news from Philadelphia. Mr. McGillivady is a friend of Connie Mack.

"No," said the hotel man, "but I've been reading in the newspapers that young Geraghty's friends in Newport, where he was once home for, are vacated him down unanimously. I think it's a shame to make the boy's pinch. There's lots of room in this hotel, with everything our dining room affords, in opera and welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Geraghty for as long a time as they will stay in Worcester. They are worth $1,500 a set, for Monday's sale of Dutch Curtains, at $1.29 the pair.

The young man a good job if he wants it, but my entire wish is that he and his bride be entertain him and his bride here until their other friends come to their senses.

Then the lights went on.

FREE TO the RUPTURED

A New Home Cure that Anyone Can Use without Operation, Pain, Danger or Loss of Time.

I have a new Method that cures rupture and I want you to use it at my expense. I am not trying to sell you a Truss, but offer you a cure that stays cured and ends all the trouble and danger of strangulation forever.

No matter whether you have a single, double or navel rupture or are following an operation, my Method is an absolute cure, no matter what your age nor how hard your work, my Method will positively cure you. I especially want to hear from those apparently hopeless cases where all forms of trusses, treatment and operations have failed. I want to show everyone at my own expense that my method will end all pain and suffering and cure you at last time.

Send me your name, health, infirmity, physical size and I will send you my Method on trial. Write me today and begin your new life. My free offer is too important to neglect a single day. Write now and begin your cure at once. It costs you no money. Simply mail coupon below. Do it to-day.

FURS At Less Than You Would Offer If Allowed To Name Your Own Price

Our new FUR Buyer, Mrs. Britton, has taken our entire Stock of FURS and FUR COATS carried over from last season and marked them down to prices that will positively insure them being sold at once. These furs have all been in cold storage on the premises during the summer and are in first-class condition, duplicate items advertised here. REASONABLE DEPOSITS accepted and FURS held in FREE storage until as late as November 10th.

EXPLANATION: A real markdown Fur Sale, the last of August, at the very opening of the Fur season, is an unheard-of event. We are going to give you in the real meaning of the word. Every coat, scarf or muff is worth its original price. The sa will begin Monday at 8:45 sharp. Women from all parts of New England be on hand ery, as many lots have broken sizes. The reason for this seemingly unreasonable loss, taken on fu which are in perfect condition, is, that our new Fur Buyer, Mrs. Britton, is determined (and wagree with her), that our New Fur Department, which will be one of the largest and most comprehensive in New England, must be opened with strictly new merchandise. To do this we he taken a tremendous loss on all fur goods carried from last season.

TOGO CHEERED BY THOUSANDS AS HE TAKES TRAIN AFTER PRAISING CITY'S HOSPITALITY

An admiring throng of several thousand persons gathered in South station yesterday afternoon to cheer Admiral Count Heihachiro Togo on his departure for Niagara Falls, after his three days stay in Boston. A large squad of police was detailed to guard the admiral as he walked from his machine, at the Summer street entrance of the South station, to his special car, the "Rocket," attached to the 1.50 train for Niagara.

The crowd desirous of getting a glimpse of the hero of Japan's famous fleet, that was so great that it was all the officers could do to clear a path for the little Admiral.

Cries of "Banzai" were heard on all sides as he stepped out on the observation platform of the car and the throng seemed away, while Admiral Togo smiled and waved his hat in recognition of the salute.

Originally planning to spend some four hours in Boston and then proceed to Quincy, intending a trip to the Atlantic fleet at Provincetown, Admiral Togo, after arriving in Boston Wednesday night, was compelled to keep his room until late in the today morning owing to an attack of acute indigestion. Yesterday, however, he arose bright and early at about 7:00, looking himself again and further than he had been since leaving Washington on the early part of his visit.

Yesterday was comparatively a mild one for the party, the program being mainly that of an exchange of official calls upon Acting Governor Fortunato Coolidge, arriving in Boston Wednesday night, was compelled to keep his room until late in the today morning owing to an attack of acute indigestion. Yesterday, however, he arose bright and early at about 7:00, looking himself again and further than he had been since leaving Washington on the early part of his visit.

Receives Many Visitors.

Immediately after breakfast in the private dining room in the suite, Admiral Togo received H. H. Tsukihira, the Japanese consul-general to the United States, who was passing through Boston on his way to Niagara Falls for moments later.

Within five minutes of the arrival of the consul-general from Japan, Admiral Togo was passing through Boston on his trip to Japan many years ago, and called on the admiral, and the two chatted for fully half an hour, the longest audience given anyone in Boston. Mr. Spelden ranked as a listening and acted as secretary, or rather, who was paymaster of the fleet.

Later in the morning Commander Coffman of the Charleston Navy Yard, accompanied by Lieutenant Commander Gerwin, visited Admiral Togo for a few moments, and in the afternoon Admiral Togo received a number of Japanese residents of Boston, who came to pay their respects in person to the admiral at the imperial suite in the Touraine.

Throng at City Hall.

A great crowd gathered about City Hall to greet him there. Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald and a number of his friends greeted Admiral Togo at City Hall, and after a stay of several minutes he left for the Hotel Touraine, where they left for Acting Governor and the Mayor returned to official visit.

Admiral Togo had expressed a desire to visit Harvard, but after he had made the two visits previously he decided to go to Cambridge would be too confusing, so he arose bright and early at about 7:00, looking himself again and further than he had been since leaving Washington on the early part of his visit.

Mail Order Dramatic School Established at Grafton

Wait, You Embryo Mary Andersons, Until You Have Written to Mr. M. N. Stratton.

Grafton Dramatic School Town's Leading "Heavy" President of the School and an Aspiring Star

NOW, you Mary Andersons of Augusta, Me., and you Kyrle Bellews of New Bedford, before you throw up your dollars' jobs and slide down on a sheet some night, liking not for N'Yawk and the offices of Mr. Frohman, whatcha doing to do when Frohman asks, What do you know about gesticulation?

Gesticulation—bah, gesticulation. What do you know about it? Know anything? All right, guess it. How shall you express fear? Don't shoot hastily, most expressive, either. And you want to be serious and actor? Thinking about running away to go on the stage? Then you must learn more about gesticulation and expression than your fathers know about the free raising of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1!

Well, it only goes to show that Doc Baldwin knew what he was talking about last month, when the fellows were sitting out there on the front porch of the Kirby House at Grafton, eight miles out from Worcester by trolley, trying to drive the blues away from M. Norcross Stratton.

M. N. Stratton, a handsome young man (as per photo) was as blue as indigo.

"It is all right for one who has been happiness and contentment," M. Norc said to Doc Baldwin, "with the associate publishers fighting one another for your stuff and I have been having a right royal time in the Simple Life, just as he gets ready for another fine season in the theatre, for you and I going to do it in the middle of another Winter, who stole whatever feet are Jerome Wheelock's head."

That what I want to know."

That Sketch Called "Nerve."

"Actions to get back to the stage again, eh?" asked Doctor, who is now knocking them dead again on the Keith circuit with that snappy little sketch called "Nerve," signing for to be once more an actor man.

"Perhaps," said M. Norcross, "I'm plain settled down family man and glad of my lot, but by Jhunder! Winter, when you don't know how long the Winter is, go here in the hills! In a week or two I'll begin rehearsing the part you folks for father Jacques's production of 'St. Cecilia.' I'll be busy and happy then, until the performance, some time in September, and then——"

"Well," said Doc Baldwin, "there you are!"

"Where who are?"

"A dramatic school!"

"In Grafton, Mass.?"

"In beautiful Grafton," said the Doc, "why not?"

"Who'd go to it?"

"All New England."

"You're crazy!"

"By mail!"

"Offices!"

"The Doc is right," said Davies, author of "Soldiers Three and Soldiers Fate".

"I don't see it," Stratton objected.

"Well," said the other actor, "think a bit. For family reasons you have given up what your friends believe would have been a great career on the stage. You studied with Mrs. Feely at Denver, with Mrs. Holmes, played in the Elitch stock and on the road, and then you came down in Grafton. Why not, as the Doc suggests, place your training and experience at the disposal of the young people of New England? Who knows? Where in the blue can might find a Garrick, or Bethan, a Nat Goodwin, or an Eva Tanguay. I don't care!"

Then sat out there on the porch of the Kirby House and talked far into the night. It must have been half past nine when they quit and went to bed.

As a result of the pow wow there began to appear catchy little advertisements in the Help Wanted columns of our leading New England newspapers. To wit:

GO ON THE STAGE. Will tell you how; exceptional opportunity now for free, descriptive circular. S. & CO., Grafton, Mass.

Doc Baldwin, who went back to both his professions soon after dropping the little seed of suggestion, and Davies, happy again on the week stands of the Keith time, will be pleased to know that the Grafton Dramatic School is flourishing like a green bay tree and that the folks are actually writing in from all over New England.

Somebody clipped one of the Grafton ads from an up State daily, not long ago, and sent it to the editor of the AMERICAN. The correspondent wanted to know if Grafton, Mass., didn't sound like a "queer sort of place to be the site of a dramatic school." So a reporter went out to Grafton to talk with the faculty and found him clerking for father-in-law in the postoffice.

Interrupted now and then by charming young women who wanted to see the latest thing in two-cent stamps, President Stratton explained.

"The main idea," he said, "is to find ambitious young people who will write to us explaining just what they want. Perhaps they are musical, or accomplished. They want a little art built around their special-

M. NORCROSS STRATTON

JEROME WHEELOCK STRIDE CHARLES CURRIEN

TOWN HALL, GRAFTON, MASS.

The Town Building at Grafton, Mass., specializes is said to be one of the best town playhouses in New England. Here Mr. Stratton tries them out. Mr. Stratton is president of the Grafton Dramatic School, and Mr. Currien, night and day clerk of the Kirby House. Statue of Jerome Wheelock, who left Grafton $50,000 on condition that $10,000 be spent for this statue. Grafton actors colony say the post of this figure is worthy the careful study.

ties. That is what I want to do, write speeches for them.

"When they write in to us, however, I first offer them the chance of taking a thirty dollar course of acting for one dollar. This is a dramatic school text book written by Ernest L. Fantine of Chicago. It contains twenty lessons. You might be learning over the prospectus while I answer the telephone.

How to Get on Stage.

The reporter found the prospectus extremely interesting, especially Lesson Sixteen, "How to Get Your First Engagement."

LESSON SIXTEEN—How to Get Your First Engagement. That is the subject which puzzles every earnest stage aspirant. "Having acquired the necessary knowledge, how shall I make her fit?" This lesson gives you full information on the subject, gives you a system that seldom fails to get you an engagement, not an idle promise.

Lesson Twelve, on "Gesticulation," Lesson Thirteen on "Expression," and Seventeen on "Conduct on Joining a Company," also promise much that is interesting.

Mr. Stratton wasn't prepared to say just how many young folks are getting ready to walk it. I. C. out of the shoe shops of New England to take a position, but he admits that he is mighty glad the Doc made the suggestion and that Davies pinned it along.

Happy Mr. Stratton is provided with "Soldiers Three and Maidens Fair," by F. H. Davies, in Baker's Editions of Plays. The printed card reads that M. Norcross Stratton, at Denver, Colo., March 4, 1900, played the part of CAPT. JOHN TALL-MADGE, Washington's body guard.

If the Grafton ads are not the least bit alarmed that Mr. Stratton, a dashing young chap like another squint at the out will push the late Jerome Wheelock off his pedestal as the town's first citizen.

Mr. Wheelock, in bronze, stands forever out there in the highway at the head of Grafton's beautiful oval Common. He was a great inventor. He is said to have left the village $50,000 on condition that $10,000 be blown in for the statue. Forty thousand dollars net, as it were. He says (on the monument):

Jerome Wheelock,
Mechanic Inventor
and Manufacturer.
Born in Grafton 1831.
Died in Worcester 1902.
His Will Contained a Generous Gift
for His Native Town.

On the far side of the Common there will be plenty room in 1950 for a bronze likeness of M. Norcross Stratton, supported by F. H. Davies and "Doc" Baldwin. But there'll be nothing doing on this piece of art unless Stratton is willing to listen to reason and bow to the growing popular demand in Grafton that Charley Currien, popular night and day clerk at the Kirby, be given the song-and-dance title on the faculty of the Mail-order Dramatic School, and the visiting interlocutor busts.

SOCIETY GIRL SAILS IN BIG CUP RACES

Quincy Trophy, Challenged for by Three Clubs, at Stake This Week.

The most important cup races of the season around Massachusetts Bay, start tomorrow in Quincy Bay. The famous Quincy Cup, bought back last year by the club that first gave it for competition some years ago, has been challenged for by three clubs—the Boston Yacht Club, the Corinthian Yacht Club and the Eastern Yacht Club.

The nineteen sonder Harpoon, for the first time this year, will be seen in action with ex-Mayor "Charlie Adams" at the helm. This fast boat will defend the cup and to get it away from the Quincy Club every challenger will have to "go some."

For the first time in yacht racing history in New England a society girl will be in the race with one of the fastest sonders afloat. Miss May Loring will sail Schlumberger, a challenger for the Quincy Cup in behalf of the Eastern Yacht Club this Loring is no novice at yacht racing and has defeated some of the best of the sonders this Summer off Marblehead.

Can Sail in Roughest Weather.

Weather is no bar to her being at the starting line. Often she has donned before and in some of the roughest weather this Summer she trimmed the Ellen, built to challenge for the Quincy Cup for the Boston Yacht Club; the Beatrice, another new sonder, and can sail her boat with the best of the yachtsmen. She has shoot all the tricks of the trade, so to speak, and is on the lookout for any little scrapping that might happen in the endeavor to get the best position at the starting line or at the turning marks.

These races will be sailed, commencing tomorrow, every day until one of the boats wins three races.

The starts will take place at 10:30. The Harpoon has not been raced this season, but has been tuned up very carefully and is the favorite. "Charlie" Adams, considered by many the best amateur skipper around Boston, began yachting right where those races will be sailed and knows the conditions perfectly. This was shown at Hull last year, when he took the cup away from the Boston Yacht Club in an easy manner.

If the Ellen, sailed by C. P. Curtis, is up to its best form, it may be able to give the Harpoon just the race it is looking for. The two boats are almost identical, as near as the designer of the Ellen could make them, and it will be Adams versus Curtis, with Miss Loring the "mid boss."

Plenty of Entertainment.

Lovers of yacht racing will find plenty to entertain them during the week and the Quincy Club will be very much in the job. The Thomas Fleming Day challenge cup for interboy catboats will be sailed at the same time the Quincy cup races take place. The Narragansett Bay boats that lost the trophy last year in their own waters will come around the Cape cup hunting and will find such catboats as the Iris, Dolly III. and other fast Quincy "cats" ready for them. The boy races will start at 2:15 and will be sailed five days.

The new series of five days racing will also take place—races for catboats sailed by boys. For some time the Quincy club has had a class of these boats and the youngsters are pretty handy with the helm and sails. A silver trophy has been offered, to be known as the Rear Admiral Dore's cup, and these races will start at 2:30.

The judges will be: Ex-Mayor John O. Hall, chairman; George A. Morse, Jr., Sumner W. Holden, Ex-Commodore Fred B. Rice, Ex-Commodore Eben W. Shepard, commander James A. Ring, U. S. N.; Benjamin Franklin, Jr., U. S. N.; T. B. Mills, Boston, president of the N. H. Y. R. A.; Goodwin, president of the N. H. Y. R. A.; W. E. Simmonds, Lauriat Crosby, John Adams, Winston, Daniel Crosby, John Adams, William H. Guy, William J. Hudson, Ex-Commodore Henry M. Faxon, and Ex-Commodore H. W. Robbins.

The starts will all take place off Quincy Yacht Club house at Hough's Neck and will be clear of sonders, catboats, and the like of the Y. R. A. of Massachusetts, the Interclub classes, the Hingham one design boats and the visiting interboy boats.

WOMAN IS HELD ON MONEY FRAUD CHARGE

Mrs. Leather of Methuen Accused of Obtaining $2,000 Under False Pretences.

LAWRENCE, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Florence Leather was arraigned in the Methuen District Court today on two complaints charging her under false pretences with. She pleaded not guilty. She was bound over to the Grand Jury in $2,000, $1,500 on one complaint and $500 on the other.

Mrs. Leather was charged with obtaining $1,165 under false pretences from Mrs. Robertshaw of North Andover, $420 from Mrs. Fred Martin of Tenney street.

Mrs. Leather was arrested at her home, No. 23 Union street, Methuen, Friday evening. She said that she had read of the arrests for her in the newspapers and had honestly returned. She had left her home suddenly last Saturday. She is the mother of five children.

The woman is accused of borrowing large sums of money and promising to pay them back when she secured a large fortune that was coming to her from relatives in Europe. She was interested in spiritualism and made friends in the Methuen Spiritual Society.

Friends Honor Marriage Jubilee.

Mr. and Mrs. Wetherell of Washington street, Whitman, received relatives and friends yesterday in informal observance of the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. Wetherell has the distinction of being one of the "Minute Men of '61." He is a member of U. A. R. and of the Masonic fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Wetherell have two children, Walter of Concord, N. H., and Miss Jennie Wetherell, who lives with her parents.

Ach! Beer Garden on City Hall Roof? Nein!

Heraus Mit Him, Burgomaster Fitzgerald! Der Armory and Others Are Still Open.

According to the best advices obtainable last night in School street and City Hall avenue, there will be no beer gardens on the City Hall roof.

Mayor Fitzgerald's suggestion of a municipal beer garden on the City Hall roof. Where the Mayor landed in Boston the other day, after a European tour with the chamber of Commerce, he was almost instantaneously over the way the Germans drank beer and give the hard stuff the go-by.

In some places—the Mayor mentioned Dusseldorf—there is even a beer garden attachment to the City Hall. Mayor Fitzgerald seemed to be delighted with the idea.

There is, however, the AMERICAN is informed to-day, authoritative, no enthusiasm for the project in the neighborhood of City Hall.

Colonel Thomas M. Guiney, whose agency is almost at the back door of the City Hall in City Hall avenue, told a reporter last night that any man who is too lazy to go to the City Hall basement to get the city Hall elevator and take fourteen steps to the fifteenth place, deserves to die of a Sultanna bifet.

Lawrence J. Sullivan was also cold pon the municipal beer project. Mr. Sullivan's office across Scollay square.

"Tis nonsense," said Larry, "that ain't the best little advertiser in the world!"

When the reporter asked, "What?" Mr. Sullivan said, "Grass."

John B. Warren Fractures Arm.

John B. Warren, age thirteen, of No. 31 Cunard street, Roxbury, was trying to do some roller skating yesterday and feet grew insubordinate. He tumbled to the sidewalk and received a fracture of the right arm, for which he was treated at the City Hospital.

FOUR DEAD, FOUR HURT IN METAL EXPLOSION

JOLIET, Ill., Aug. 19.—Four men are dead, four others dying and nine in hospitals suffering with fractured arms or legs as the result of an explosion of molten metal at the plant of the Illinois Steel Company. The explosion occurred when several tons of molten iron spout upon the floor. Two walls of the building collapsed, imprisoning nearly a hundred men. Rescuers set at work at once. One of the dead is still buried in the tons of metal.

Wrinkles Disappear As If By Magic

(From Peoter Republican)

"In the removal of wrinkles I have discarded cosmetics entirely," writes Mme. Corsan, the celebrated Parisian beauty expert. "The results they produce are deceptive and never permanent. Massaging is only partially successful and it's too slow a method.

"I've never seen anything work such wonders as a simple, harmless solution any woman can prepare and use at home without the least trouble. A half pint of witch hazel and an ounce of good powdered saxolite are all you'll need. Mix the two and apply this refreshing solution to your face daily. The effect is marvelous—instantaneous. The skin becomes firmer, 'tighter'—every wrinkle and sag is affected. You feel so fine after using the wash; you look years younger.'

TWO PHOTOS OF MARJORIE HAMILTON, THE FAMOUS "CALENDAR GIRL," SHOWING HER REDUCTION OF 37 LBS. IN FIVE WEEKS.

Marjorie Hamilton, known throughout America as the famous "Calendar Girl," is now recognized as the greatest known expert in the art of reducing, and she practices only simple, natural methods in overcoming double chin and superfluous fat.

She is acknowledged as the highest-priced stenographer in the world for her set calendars in America, demanding one hundred dollars a day from noted "Calendar Houses" for her time. Realizing as an actress that superfluous fat would no longer keep her in mad demand as a photographic artist, she set about to reduce her increasing weight by a marvelous method of her own discovery.

No harmful drugs or terrible massaging; no strenuous, fatiguing physical culture exercises; no starvation diet; nothing to take internally; no poison added to rub on the body and none of the old, ridiculous, harmful drug methods are used in her splendid new treatment.

The free book of this Queen of Beauty explains how, by her combining of her own natural, harmless treatment, they may reduce your excessive weight at the rate of one pound or more daily. How any man or woman may banish double chin quickly and regain new health and vigor.

Our readers will be astonished to learn for the first time of a really new, marvelous scientific method of reducing. FIVE WEEKS' TUITION, as referred to in this splendid book, and how to reduce weight at the rate of a pound or more daily. How any man or woman may banish double chin quickly and regain new health and vigor.

Our readers will be astonished to learn for the first time of a really new, marvelous scientific method of reducing. FIVE WEEKS' TUITION, as referred to in this splendid book, and how to reduce weight at the rate of a pound or more daily. How any man or woman may banish double chin quickly and regain new health and vigor.

You will be amazed to know how rapidly you may reduce double chin and every excess fat by following her instructions and using her simple, harmless treatment. All fat men and women of any age who desire to make themselves more attractive should secure this wonderful book free at once and improve their figure quickly by her secret home treatment.

Mrs. Jessie Bing says she lost 14 pounds the first week.

This book is written in a fascinating style. It explains how, by her combining of this famous photographic model, who is the regular "Calendar Girl" of the present time, reduced her own weight THIRTY-SEVEN POUNDS, FIVE WEEKS by purely natural methods, and without resorting to drugs, diet, starving, or harmful external stuff to rub on the body, or harmful exercises. It is said her new treatment is similar to that used by famous French actresses and court ladies of Europe who dare not grow fat.

Write for it at once, and learn the anguish she felt when her girlish beauty started to develop abnormal proportions. Read of the terrors she felt when the monster fat made her realize she was on the road to wrinkles and fade into oblivion.

Learn how she experimented, and with determination and grit conquered fat; learn of these things so you may improve your own form and destroy your fat as it will not be possible necessary for you to subject yourself to the awful dangers of excessive flesh.

Violent exercises, starvation diets and worthless drugs, also harmful external stuff to rub on the body, are all of no benefit. So, realizing that if she desired to longer remain as the star in her profession, and be longer sought after by art celebrities because of her beauty and figure, she must do something quick to prevent the enemy fat from destroying her beauty, she studied on an entirely original and different plan, and after many months and many failures, made what she considers a wonderful discovery, namely, by means of which she has perfected a treatment which actually reduces fat in a remarkably short time, and adds to the strength and health of the individual with every pound taken off.

This woman's remarkable success has amazed her friends, who stand aghast in astonishment at her marvelous, yet simple skill. Her method is so simple, yet it is looked upon with curiosity and admiration. By this system and her combination treatment any person should reduce their flesh in the privacy of their own homes without medical assistance, in many instances at the rate of one pound or more daily.

Mrs. C. Bell writes in a grateful letter, stating she is losing a pound a day.

Mrs. L. Palmer writes the new treatment is wonderful and the safest thing she ever used. She lost 9½ pounds the first few days, and states her abdomen is four inches smaller.

confidence to permit publication of the addresses of those kind enough to express their heartfelt gratitude to her.

The most astonishing part of this fat-reducing method is that it does not create wrinkles or leave the skin flabby, but, on the contrary, it has a tendency to tighten it, something not usually attempted by other methods.

All our readers who wish to give up harmful diet, starvation methods, who wish to abandon the harmful internal and external remedies and painful exercises, should write for a copy of her latest work, so that they may learn how to be rid of superfluous flesh and double chin. Nothing, in my opinion, could be more effective. This is the only scientific method of treatment, endorsed by the medical profession. I consider your method of treatment not only original, but wonderful clever, and the only truly scientific way to reduce superfluous flesh and double chin harmlessly and quickly.

Miss Eliza LaVelle writes in and says: "The treatment is most wonderful; so easy to use and so rapid. It was such relief not to be obliged to use medicine or dreadful exercises. I ate all I wanted, yet kept right on reducing."

Enthusiastic letters as the above should be indisputable evidence of the remarkable merits of this treatment. The delighted letters from satisfied users which are being received from fat men and women are regarded as strictly confidential. Miss Hamilton considering it a great breach of

BEATTIE ON TRIAL FOR LIFE TOMORROW

RICHMOND, Va., August 19.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr. will be placed on trial for his life in Chesterfield County Courthouse at this city tomorrow morning. Any unforeseen delay in the selection of a jury will be overcome by the presence of hundreds of witnesses who have been summoned for the State and a venire of 100 talesmen has been called.

It is expected that two days will be spent in finding the jury. Then will come addresses to the jury by defence and prosecution. The first witness probably will take the stand on Wednesday and the real battle for and against the life of young Beattie will then be on.

When Beattie is placed on the stand in his own behalf he will be asked questions regarding his wife's jewels which will prove embarrassing. The night of the murder the young man entered his wife's room and saw several rings and pins on the dresser and he was seen to drop a silk handkerchief over them.

He walked away and returned in a few minutes, picked up the handkerchief and the rings. Along with the rings he grabbed a watch, according to the story from one who witnessed the affair, belonging to a member of the family. His attention was called to this and he returned the watch. The rings have not been seen since, say the officers. The night that Mrs. Beattie started on the ride which ended in her death she wore her wedding ring that has not been seen since that night, the officers further declare.

Beattie is losing sleep, his appetite has gone and he is growing restless. The belief is that he will break down before the trial is over.

PROVINCETOWN DARK AS BIG FLEET GOES

The North Atlantic Squadron, the most formidable fleet of warships ever assembled on the New England coast and which conducted important war manoeuvres around Provincetown for weeks past, has been distributed to many ports and the naval roster of 1911 is a thing of the past.

The Delaware, the biggest dreadnought afloat, is at Salem. She was sent to England by the United States Government to represent it at the Spithead marine review during the coronation of King George. The Delaware crew scored a great social success in the city of witches and its gayest girl in town to the dance it gave in Frank Ix Hall last night.

The battleships Vermont, New Hampshire and South Carolina are in Rockland. Yesterday 1,500 sailors were given shore leave and almost every home in town opened its doors open to the tars. At Rockport and Gloucester also large parties of the sailors chartered a special train for Boston for the afternoon and evening. They were due back aboard their ships at midnight. This morning the ships will steam back to Provincetown.

The sailors who stayed in Rockland yesterday enjoyed band concerts and open air banquets tendered by citizens and those who had occasion to spend "watches below" could sleep in the Town Hall, where cots were put for their use.

The Nebraska, Michigan and Kansas are still at Provincetown and have not accompany the Missouri, Mississippi, Idaho, Virginia and Ohio. They will stay only a few hours longer.

The cruiser Washington, which came to Boston several days ago, will soon be bound south and will join the flagship Connecticut and the destroyers and submarines already on the way. The second division starts out this afternoon. The Kansas will meet them off Provincetown at 4 o'clock. The Missouri, Mississippi and Idaho leave at 5 o'clock, and the Nebraska, Michigan and Delaware, which are part of the first division, will get under way for Norfolk at 6.

The squadron will rendezvous in the south in about ten days, but before the time comes for manoeuvring on target ranges, the old battleship Texas will have been blown out of the water. The ship Delaware is to use the discarded ship for a target.

MILITARY MASS AT CASTLE ISLAND

The closing feature of the week's encampment of the Willoughby Cadets, Total Abstinence Regiment at camp in Wakefield, will be a military mass and an inspection by Bishop Brady today. To provide for the large number of persons who are expected to attend, the Rev. James F. Mahoney, regimental chaplain, has set up an altar beside the walls of the fort. The regiment leaves for home immediately after 3 o'clock.

The colonelcy of the corps will be filled by Major Thomas J. O'Connell, chaplain-general of the Boston Cadets Total Abstinence Union, will be made colonel and the Rev. Father P. Mahoney of St. Joseph's church, Watertown, will be made chaplain. The services will be presided over by the Rev. William J. Cooke of Malden. An impressive feature will take place at the elevation of the host. Instead of the customary ringing of the bell a salute will be fired from a gun manned by the regiment by the members of the South Boston Yacht Club. A bugler will also toot a note and the "long roll" will be given by the drummer of the regiment and the members of the regiment will stand at attention.

Officers and members of the newly formed Boston Catholic Total Abstinence regiment will appear in uniform under the command of Colonel Dinneen and Lieutenant-Colonel Shea. Members of the Dinneen Total Abstinence Association of Roxbury and Colonel Shea's Father Mathew A. A. and B. Society will be represented by a large delegation of each corps.

Colonel Murphy and the officers of the visiting regiment will participate in the honors of different societies during the day. The regimental band will play at intervals this afternoon and evening, forming the evening mess there with a real parade and grand concert. Several local priests, headed by the Rev. Walter J. Connor, will be on the grounds to-night. John J. Shea, president of the Boston Union, will be a special guest.

Remarkable Home Treatment For All Foot Trouble

"Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calicylic Compound in a basin of hot water, soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes. Less time will not bring results. Massage the sore parts gently while in the water." This should be repeated for a number of nights until the cure is permanent. The effects are almost magical. All soreness goes instantly and the feet feel so good that the whole nervous system is benefited. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Bunions are reduced and the inflammation drawn out. Sweaty, bad smelling feet and swollen, tender feet need but a few applications. Any druggist has Calicylic in stock or will get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually sufficient to cure the worst foot. Calicylic is not a patent medicine. Formerly used only by doctors, but now is obtainable by the public in general, and is saving many an hour of torture for thousands.

Speaker Walker Is Running "For the Good of His Party"

Believes Voters Have Grown "Tired of Machine Rule"

Candidate for Governor Not to Have Paid Workers or Carriages.

JOSEPH H. WALKER, WHO SEEKS NOMINATION

Going Into the Race Relying Wholly Upon Wishes of the People.

By MAURICE F. MURPHY.

THE Sunday AMERICAN presents today the third in a series of interviews with men who are each a text possible Governor of Massachusetts. To-day's interview is with Joseph Walker of Brookline, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The first interview in the series was with Governor Foss.

The second interview, printed last Sunday, was with Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham.

Mr. Walker has his say to-day. Representative Norman White, the fourth man in the field, has promised an interview for next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Speaker Is Frank.

This series of interviews has awakened an unusual interest in mid-summer politics.

Mr. Walker's interview to-day comes up to the mark for frankness and for forceful statements. The Speaker talks straight from the shoulder.

"What the people have in mind," says Speaker Walker, "is not so much what Governor Foss has done, but why he has done it. They consider that he has conducted his administration with an eye to feathering his own political nest rather than with an eye to benefiting the State."

Mr. Walker agrees with one important statement made by Governor Foss in his recent interview for the Sunday AMERICAN—that the State's finances need the introduction of new systems if not a general overhauling.

"Maybe," said the Speaker, "I am pretty fond of the State House. I've really enjoyed myself up there. And I don't mean that in the sense that I've had a picnic up there. It's the work that I've enjoyed. I enjoy politics for its serious work which there is in it.

"That's the reason why I have determined to employ in this campaign no methods which will not be approved by everyone. Mine is not a money campaign. I have no paid political workers, and will not have any. Those who are working for me do so because they are my friends and because they believe in me.

Wants to Better His Party.

"I have laid down these rules and others in my campaign for the good of the Republican party. That is the main thing in my mind—the good of the Republican party. What I am trying to show the Republican voters now is not that I am a better or a louder talker or a more rapid-fire campaigner than my opponents, but that my nomination is necessary for the good of the Republican party.

"Now as to my platform. I believe that in view of the increase in expenditures and in view of the increase in net debt we should now carefully examine our books and lay down a sound financial policy for the State.

"I believe that two main things are necessary:

"First—A State Finance Commission.

"Second—A genuine State income tax.

"The State Finance Commission should be a permanent body. It should be composed of experts. It should watch out for the State's business and for the business of cities and towns. It should assist the Governor in the administration of boards and commissions, in the making up of the budget and in the establishing of a sound policy for borrowing money.

Pay As You Go Plan.

"I believe the Commonwealth should pay as it goes, and that all annual expenses should be paid out of the annual income and not by the annual tax levy. We should borrow money only for extraordinary expenses. The sinking fund system should be abolished. The State should do what that all direct taxes such as this should be left to the State. The revenue from an income tax would equal in Massachusetts alone more than all our ordinary annual expenditures. It should not be turned over to the national treasury, where it is not needed, but should be left here where it is needed.

Speaker of the House of Representatives tells Sunday AMERICAN just why he seeks to be Republican candidate for Governor.

"Why did I become a candidate for Governor? Because I felt that the Republican party in Massachusetts had gone to sleep, so to speak, and that it was time for the rank and file to make their own nomination of candidates. It should not be a publican party was well or badly managed, the fact is that it was not well managed. The State convention was a packed affair from A to Z, and from top candidates.

"I would myself why the rank and file shouldn't take a hand. It struck me that the state should be allowed to say before in the matter of party nominations. Their business should be to elect or assist in electing candidates after they have been nominated. It is not for them for them to take a hand for or against aspirants for nominations.

"With regard to the 'succession' idea, I've been told that the fact that a candidate for Governor is now Lieutenant-Governor should not be used either for or against him. Each candidate should stand on his own merits, with equal ability and his own record.

"I trust that in this campaign every voter will try to judge fairly between the candidates alone. I shall abide by the decision of the voters. I want the decision to be the decision of the voters themselves, and not the decision of machine politicians, such as I have described. The Republican party as a party will have no influence with the voters. Each candidate must depend upon his own record and upon his own ability as an individuals and not upon as the guardian of the party. I trust that they will do this not only in form but in fact.

Will Whip the Machine.

"I heard in Fall River only the other day that certain men identified with the machine had been down there asking for votes for one of our opponents on the ground that he is 'the party's candidate.' It is in the voters' power to teach these men that Direct Nominations will not permit such abuses as were practised under the convention system, and that the great mass of the voters, enjoying the Australian ballot, cannot be whipped or cajoled into line like a lot of conventional delegates.

"The machine is against me. It wants me defeated because I am opposed to machine rule. I whipped the machine in the Direct Nominations fight in 1910, and again this year, and I'll whip them in this fight. I believe I am the choice of the majority of Republican voters to pick to lead the fight for them this Fall.

"I wouldn't be candidate for Governor this Fall if the Governor's voters were still in force. I want my nomination to come from the voters and not from any machine. I want to owe my nomination and election to the people, and not to any political or business clique. I have been my own master in every office I have ever held. I would not take the Governorship unless I could still be my own master.

A Governor cannot be his own master unless he gets his nomination and election direct from the people.

Where's That?

"Where's that? I haven't said anything about Governor Foss. Well, I'm not going to stump and rave against Governor Foss if I couldn't criticize him fairly I shouldn't criticize him at all. There is plenty of room for fair criticism, however. The chief ground for criticism is that he has conducted his administration with an eye to feathering his own political nest rather than with an eye to benefiting the State.

He Criticizes Foss.

"The people are dissatisfied with Eugene N. Foss in the Governor's chair. They look on him as a political Governor, not as a business Governor. What the people have in mind is not so much what Governor Foss has done, but why he has done it. As I said before, they believe he has conducted his administration with an eye to feathering his own political nest rather than with an eye to benefiting the State.

"I want it understood right now that if the Republican voters decide that I'm not the candidate they want this Fall, I shall support whomever they select as the Republican candidate. I go with all the enthusiasm there is in me. At any rate, I shall do for my party as my friends feel as I do—that I am going to be nominated.

"While, of course, it is always the practice for defeated candidates to support the party nominees, I consider it important to urge unanimity at this time. I believe the honor of helping the party to win an election. It is particularly important this year that the party stand solidly together if it wishes to win its fight in the State and the nation in the immediate future.

"It ought to be remembered, too, that unanimity among the Republicans is necessary not only for our success in the State election this Fall but also for the best Taft's success in the national election next year. We must stand solidly behind our President-Taft. He is the greatest of all our Presidents. He has done more for the good of the country, but he will

GAELIC REVIVAL IS STRONG IN WEST

Miss Walsh, Secretary of the Boston Branch, Sends Encouraging News.

Boston officials of the Gaelic Alliance have received some highly interesting accounts of the progress of the Gaelic revival movement in the West from Miss Katharine H. Walsh, the secretary of the Boston branch of the Alliance. Miss Walsh is spending her vacation in the West. During her travels she has interviewed many of the leading Gaelic League supporters and got from them much information which will be helpful to the work of the Boston committee.

At a meeting of the Gaelic Alliance Committee of Boston, held in the South Boston Gaelic School under the presidency of Jeremiah Carroll, Mrs. M. E. Conley, in behalf of the committee on native costume, reported that she had received from Ireland an exact copy of the costume worn there in the tenth century. This style costume will be worn by girls representing different parts of Ireland at the Feis and ball of the Gaelic League to be held November 25, in Paul Revere Hall.

Revive Old Costumes.

The committee aims at inaugurating at the coming feis the custom of pipes and dancers wearing the Irish national dress at public entertainments.

Of the progress of the Gaelic revival in Chicago, Miss Walsh says in her report to the Boston committee:

"In no other city that I have visited the Irish people of Chicago retain the inspiriting influence of their visit of the two delegates from Ireland, the Rev. Father O'Flanagan and Patrick MacGowan. The league in Chicago receives great support from distinguished and influential citizens, clergy and laity alike.

"Among those present to-day at the reception given in connection with the Gaelic Garden, P. Ryan Twomey and Thomas T. Duffy, two men are performing a splendid work in the Irish choral society of which Mr. Twomey is leader. The Boston Feis, which is a great success.

In carrying out this work the societies simply follow the advice of Dr. Douglas Hyde, national president of the Gaelic League, who says:

"Let our Irish musical societies be the happy neutral grounds upon which all can meet, no matter how they might differ in politics, politics or even in taste; meet in unity, and there with the exhibition of pleasing Ireland among the musical nations of the world."

Zealous Worker for Cause.

Patrick H. O'Donnell, a prominent Chicago lawyer, is also a zealous worker in the cause of Gaelic revival. He also one of the members of the Irish Fellowship Club, whose membership of 1,000 is all leading Chicago men who are of the Irish race. The club was formed in honor of Patrick's day of the President of the United States. The reception tendered to President Taft on that occasion was the most grand and enthusiastic ever tendered to any other executive of the country.

Another important feature of the Gaelic movement in the West is the Junior Movement, by means of which the children are taught the Gaelic tongue, the history of Ireland and the sweet tunefulness of the Irish folk songs.

Under the leadership of Coloman Ryan, John E. McMorrow and Professor Bowden the education of the young in Irish songs and dances is progressing splendidly in Chicago, Milwaukee and other important cities in the West.

Summing up her observations of the patriotic activities of the Irish societies in Chicago and the West, Miss Walsh says:

"I am of the opinion that a revival of Irish is coming to Boston to demonstrate their methods."

RECLUSE OF 80 DEAD; HUNT HIDDEN RICHES

Plymouth County Hermit Believed to Have Buried Money in Cabin.

PLYMOUTH, Aug. 10.—The death early today of James W. Churchill, the octogenarian recluse of Sandwich road, will probably lead to strenuous efforts to discover his hidden riches, the general belief being that the old man had money buried all about his cabin. He was eighty-three years old.

Churchill was called the "Plymouth County hermit," but he was not a hermit in the strict sense of the word, being a familiar figure and a close buyer at the Jabez Cotner grocery.

He came back to Plymouth after the war and had lived alone ever since. When he grew weak, a few months ago, Mrs. Thankful Atwood was installed in the house as nurse and caretaker. The old man had deposits in the banks of Plymouth, Whitman, and, it is said, Rockland. He turned to the banks eight years ago, after a sudden bursting at the bank of a rubber carrying a crowbar, but he is not believed to have trusted his all to the savings banks.

DRAMATIC DANCER TO VISIT COHASSET

Mme. Teresa Cerutti Will Entertain in Town Hall Next Saturday Afternoon.

MME. TERESA CERUTTI, a famous European dramatic dancer, but absolutely new to Boston society, will appear at Cohasset Town Hall next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The North River Commune colony will be well represented at the debut of this artiste in Greater Boston. Mrs. Foss, wife of the Governor, heads the list of patronesses, though she will be unable to be present as she is in San Francisco. Other leading members of the South Shore contingent are on the patroness list.

Mme. Cerutti is heralded as the originator of dramatic dancing, which has interested society so much in the last few years. She will offer six Egyptian and five Brunhilde dances at Cohasset. These are the same dances that she has given at the Opera Comique, before President Falliere of France, the Duchess de Noailles, Gabriele d'Annunzio, Baron Denon, Director of Egypt and other official, artistic and society notables.

Boston Girl to Sing.

She will be assisted by Mrs. Elsie Washburn, reader for society; and by Miss Clara Barrows, dramatic soprano. She appears in this country under the management of Miss Barrieaux. The latter, one of our own Boston girls, has taken a lively interest of late through her wish to establish in Boston a repertory along the lines of the famous "Little Theatre" of Paris.

Mme. Cerutti has just made her debut in America, appearing in New York during recess. She has entertained for Mrs. Lionel Guest, Mrs. Harry Lehmann, Mrs. Walter Maynard, Mrs. Mumford Green and for the Barnard Club.

She brought to America letters of introduction to Mrs. Gregory Foster, Mayor from Mme. Emile Barrere, wife of the French ambassador in Rome, and from the Marchese Vita de Marco.

From Cohasset Mme. Cerutti will go to Bar Harbor to appear in the Building of Arts in that aristocratic watering place.

Studied Under Ristore.

At Cohasset Mme. Cerutti's programme will include, for Egyptian dances, "The Rite of the Four Cardinal Points," "Isis," "The Double" or mummy dance and others. Her Byzantine dances include such as "Little Thyrse" (from Diouysos-Odrach), "Echarpe," "Dancomba," "Bayadeuses" and others, all in appropriate costume.

Mme. Cerutti began her dramatic studies under Ristore. She has studied in European universities, the sculptured paintings and books concerning Egyptian Byzantine and Greek art. She is said to possess, at the same time, interpreting the theme not only by the rhythm of the steps, but by expression, as she is a mistress of pantomime.

SHOE MEN THANK TAFT.

Telegraph Approval of Free List Bill Veto.

The following telegram has been sent President Taft by the Boston Boot and Shoe and Leather Association:

Boston, August 10, 1911.

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON FACE AND BODY

When Two Months Old. She Scratched, as It Itched. Did Not Sleep for More than a Week. Was In a Terrible Condition.

Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and In Two Weeks She Was Well.

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, thick, and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. A doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She began to scratch as it itched, and, she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. I then got from the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of mud.

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference, in color, it was red, and I continued with them. My baby was a terrible sight. In all, I used the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment four times a day, and in two weeks she was entirely well. The Cuticura Soap and Ointment did perfectly and for skin and scalp troubles, I can say nothing less than to use the same treatment to-day, and will continue to, for it makes my baby's skin as soft and white as velvet." (Signed) Mrs. Thomas Gallagher, Jr., 1 Mt. Washington Ave., Boston, Mass., Aug. 26, 1910.

For more than a generation, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the purest, sweetest, and most economical treatment for disfiguring eczemas, rashes, and itchings, of infants, children, and adults. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and a box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 19B, Boston, for a liberal sample of each, postfree, together with 32-p. book on the care and treatment of skin and scalp troubles.

MAYOR IS SHARP IN REPLY TO SULLIVAN

Believes That Salaried Officials Should Accept Work on Unpaid Boards.

FIRE DEPARTMENT STAND

Insists Explanation of High Per Capita Cost Should Be Given Citizens.

Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday tartly replied to the letter received from Chairman John A. Sullivan of the Finance Commission, declining a place on the new commission to investigate fire protection in this city, and then announced that he had appointed Ruth Commissioner Francis M. Carroll to take Chairman Sullivan's place on the new board.

The Mayor was not surprised at the declination of the head of the Finance Commission, intimating that he expects letters of a similar tone from certain department officials, including school committeemen. The Mayor thinks, however, that a high salaried official should be willing to devote some time to an unpaid commission when the citizens are so vitally interested.

The Mayor's letter to Chairman Sullivan reads:

Writes to Chairman Sullivan.

John A. Sullivan, chairman, the Boston Finance Commission.

Dear Sir: Your letter of August 19, declining to serve on a commission to be appointed by me for the investigation of the needs of the Fire Department, has been received. In this communication you decline to absolve me that the whole matter has been settled and nothing remains for me to do but to ratify your decision.

I am frank in saying, his tone in the communications which I receive from certain departments of the government, I was surprised to a certain degree in the attitude of the School Committee a year ago when it established a force of seventeen hundred and eighty-seven (1,787) pupils, and for the five years as a result of certain appropriations. My own contention was that conditions were so likely to bring a call for assistance as in the instance in the school population, and the results have proved that I was not mistaken. The report which I published by the Statistics Department, gave a total of eighty-six hundred and seven (8,207) pupils between Norwegian 20 June, which on authority of the School Committee was presented, and February 28, 1911, in which time, as now, was the season of making for a greater or smaller by the payrolls of a department in all lines of changes which might be made in the future make such an audition unnecessary.

Explains Point of View.

When convinced by a broader investigation than that which furnishes the basis of your report that the city should spend $195,000 at once and add $60,000 a year or more to its tax levy, I shall recommend this expenditure to the City Council as advised by you. In the meantime, permit me to say that no one of the Fire Commissioners whom you quote has ever favored or asked an increase in the number of firemen in any official document, or so far as I have been able to ascertain in any form this phase of the problem the importance which it has assumed in the eyes of your predecessors. I have noted for its desire to reduce rather than increase the number of city employes.

In this connection, permit me to quote an editorial from the Boston Transcript of August 4, 1910, commenting on an asserting attributed to acting Commissioner Carroll that two more men were needed in the department:

"The number of men in the department is over 800, and it is said that the situation is not a new one and hardly affords warrant for the suggestion of the acting head of the department that the force should be increased ten per cent at once. The head of a department naturally sees legitimate needs that are not evident enough at first to the executive or legislative branches of the municipal government, and Newport is one of this one the recommendations are usually considerably in advance of their satisfaction, but not in recent years have the suggestions for increase been passed at such a round number as ten. The proposal to increase would mean a matter of about $200,000, a sum for which the city is to be prepared to assume at such short notice.

This is precisely the point of view which I have taken, and which I shall maintain until the new commission has reported. I have from a table compiled by Professor C. F. Merriam, and printed in the University of Chicago Magazine, that the per capita cost of the fire department of Glasgow and Vienna is twelve and sixteen cents respectively to Philadelphia and Chicago the cost is only ninety-two cents and one dollar and fourteen cents.

Calls For the Facts.

Boston heads the entire list of European and American cities with a per capita expenditure of $2.36, which is twenty times that of Glasgow, fifteen times that of Vienna, two and one-half times that of Philadelphia and twice that of Chicago. Yet your commission, so keen on the scent of extravagance in other departments, asks me to jump this expenditure immediately by the sum of $195,000, which is about equal to the entire amount of the department in Glasgow for two years. You base this recommendation of a report of the Fire Commissioner which has never been submitted to the responsible head of the city government, and which I never saw until it was incorporated in your letter.

What I want as Mayor of the city, responsible to the taxpayers for outlay and results, is some satisfying explanation of the huge cost of fire protection in this city. I consider a delay of a few days well worth while if it result in a saving of expense a farthest approach to fire-fighting methods, the amendments to the building laws, even in a more thorough understanding of the unique conditions that appear to exist in Boston

OH, WOE! OH, MISERY! THE GLOOMS HAVE TAKEN NEWPORT

Miss Constance Warren, "She wonders what her chief rival, Miss Eleonora Sears will do next.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. She puts her farmerettes a source of much trouble to her.

Miss Eleonora Sears. She seems to be much concerned about a certain party. "He loves me, he loves me not."

Miss Mildred Sherman. Will you worry if you're going home to marry a real live lord

Countess Gleichen. English strike a cause of great annoyance

Joy No Longer Rules at the Summer Capital of Fashion.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19.—That little farmerette girl who came up from Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's suffragette farmette down on Long Islandette, a few weeks ago, to spend a day or two at Marble House, and who refused back to the farm to observe to a horrid newspaper person that Newport is the "saddest city in the United States," was just about half right and approximately 50 per cent wrong.

Newport isn't sad, and Newport isn't unhappy, so much as Newport is worried, about a variety of things.

Years ago it was the cab drivers, who today number not less than three hundred. Nowadays they take to the next county, the beautiful Ocean drive and back through Bellevue avenue, pointing out the show places and making a quiet little speech, somewhat in the style of the rubberneck wagons of the big cities.

The hack drivers of today, however, are quiet and gentlemanly. True, "Billy" Brigham can be heard distinctly in the best-behaved residence section of the county, but William is nothing like the staid shouters of ten years ago.

"This is Goldcrest," they used to say, "the home of Mr. and Mrs. Many Millionbucks. Mrs. Millionbucks was originally the wife of Elmer Dustmatzar, the Tripe King. She divorced Dustmatzar and married Lemuel Astorbilt, who divorced her. Then Millionbucks got her, having himself been divorced by Eloise Multimilt."

You know this wasn't pleasant, for the Millionbucks to hear shouted under their front windows to a lot of yaps from all over the country, and so divorces were quite common in these days and so from the pulpit about them, lots and lots of Newport folk were worried by hack drivers.

Those Were Happy Days.

Those were the good old days, when Thomas Wentworth Higginson wrote of Oldport":

"Each season brings its own attractions. In Summer one may relish what is new in Oldport, as the liveries, the fincnes, the manners. There is often a delicious freshness about these exhibitions; it is a pleasure to see some opulent citizen in his first kid gloves."

However, in spite of the fact that the Newport seasons remain open until 1 or 2 o'clock every morning, at $400 a year a farmer girl from Mrs. Belmont's Adam Eden feels declares that Newport is "on today."

This is what the suffragette farmerette had to say about us. The young people of our set are talking about it at the casino every morning, at Bailey's Beach, and at dinners all over the island.

When we were at Newport, last Sunday, I did not see what you were all on a happy looking man or woman. They all look so bored, when they supposedly have everything that is supposed to make one happy.

The young lady from the Belmont farm at Hempstead went on to her class at the Newport school, and told her friends that Newport has a permanent population of 10,000. The Summer Rgarz is about 30,000.

However, just to check up the farmerette's opinion of us a reporter for the Boston Daily AMERICAN set out today to make a little tour of some of the society folk. In one word, the girl of the report is right and women of the Belmont farmette set is that they seem to be worried rather than unhappy.

Just See August Belmont.

Take August Belmont, for instance. Mr Belmont, at fifty-eight, seems to be worried because his girth, and one thing and another, keeps him out of the polo games of the Westchester Club, at Brenton's Point. Newport can remember when the American representative of the Rothschilds was the Summer City's star polofist.

Even Nathaniel Thayer, one of your Boston millionaires, seen at the exclusive Reading Room, seemed a little preoccupied. Mr. Thayer is one of the fifteen millionaires who make up the Gooseberry Island Fishing Club. He has just been elected to its executive committee. Hence those marks of care?

The lines of worry that close observers see in the countenance of Edward J. Berwind are said to be due to the fact that he may be worrying about the price of coal. He owns lots of coal of the big coal properties of the United States.

Mr. Higbee Mills seemed never to mistaken for "Sunny Jim," for Mr. Mills is the grandson-in-law of Earl Grantel just over from the old country to give the cousins a dash of genuine old aristocracy.

W. Watts Sherman, formerly a loyal member of the Knickerbocker Club, has also been put up for membership in the Westchesters. Mr. Sherman is the proud father of Miss Mildred Sherman, soon to be the bride of the present Lord Cannes. Cannes is expected in Newport next Thursday. The Shermans give a dinner in his honor on the 30th.

Henry A. C. Taylor, Taylor of Annapolis pedi whose wife was Josephine Jones, really never to worry about anything, but Mr. Taylor is a multimillionaire. He dropped today was that of a bloodhound with a string around his finger, having forgotten what string tied it on the string.

Crops Worry Reginald.

And Lewis Cass Ledyard of Sunset Ridge Villa, president or director in dozens of express and railroad companies—who did Lewis Cass Ledyard be logging Bull Run around? Why, Andrew? Didn't he? Our report today is that of a bloodhound with a string around his finger, having forgotten what string tied it on the string.

T. Suffern Tailer, one of society's favorite sons and best fellows, has every right to worry. It seems to be the unanimous opinion of tourist visitors that Bailey's Beach and the home of Hon. C. Oliver Iselin, loveliest if not the most pretentious place in town. Most of the visitors bring kodaks with them. Nine out of ten feel that they must take a shot at the Tailer place. Four out of ten have been walking in upon the grounds.

Reggie Vanderbilt, now an honest farmer in Middletown, just over the Newport border, is worried because of what happened to everybody's crop this year. The suffragette farmerette ought to be able to understand Reginald's unhappiness.

As to the Rev. Roderick Terry of Lime den Gate, whose wife was a Marquand of the Rev. Terry worries because he is a clergyman. Every clergyman in Newport is worried, more or less, like clergymen everywhere else.

Theodore H. Davis, of the Reefs out at Brenton's Point, sometimes called the world's greatest archeologist and famous for his Egyptian explorations from doing so much visiting good in Newport that the Joys beat the idlesome away from him whenever they saw their merry steps in bands of Americans, from every Park bath-the Union, admitting the city for the home Mr. Davis gave to the city for the children of the Fifth ward. Have sung the praises of the donor in the forehead of And why these lines on the forehead of George L. Rives of Swansea, Mass., and somebody under the name of American Hay? Perhaps Mr. Rives is worried because Grover Cleveland hasn't appointed to be growing fewer and fewer.

Dear Girls Worry Also.

Worse and more of it, our girls have caught the worry fever.

The Countess Gleichen may be worrying about the railroad strike in England.

Mildred Sherman might be worrying over her rank as Lady Cannes, whether she takes precedence over Countess Granard, or vice versa.

Constance Warren may have Eleonora Sears on her mind. What will the Boston girl do next? Something in athletics that Connie Warren cannot do? Impossible! Yet Miss Warren seems worried.

As of the mistress of society, they have yet to decide which is Mrs. Astor's successor as leader. Shall it be Mrs. Ogden Mills, as so many affect to believe, or the crown go to Mrs. John D. Dresel? Will Mrs. Astor have a real successor? Many say not.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont could be worried about any number of things, if she would but give Mr. Belmont a hardy of the worrying sort. If she would only try. First a Mrs. Belmont as the leader of the American Woman Suffrage movement. Then there is that farm at Hempstead. Is it going to the dogs going? Are the cows laying? Are the farmerettes staling? Are there any horrid men about? Mrs. Belmont in the command of Mr. Harold Vanderbilt, the latest candidate selected by the hopefuls of Newport for the hand of Miss Eleonora Sears. Miss Sears, by the way, is again a guest at Marble House.

So much for individual cases and worries all, naturally, a matter of the most scrumptuous guesswork. Newport on whole Newport summer and Newport all the year round have a collective worry of the first magnitude

About Eaton's Beach.

It is all about Easton's Beach!

Shall Easton's Beach be Coney-Island-ized?

This island is already split on the question.

Horrors!

The Newport beach you read about in magazines and the best sellers and the society columns is Bailey's, out near Spouting Rock and the home of Hon. C. Oliver Iselin. Easton's, almost in town and straight out Bath road from the Casino, is the populist, or "public," beach. Such at least was the original intention, but Bailey's is hardly big enough for all who would like to be exclusive, and the "private" end of Easton's has been growing larger and larger with years.

The Newport Board of Aldermen has the say about Easton's, however, and with the close of a ten-year lease at hand there is talk of modernizing Easton's in such a way as to attract and please the tourist. Many of the all-the-year-around folks would be glad to welcome to our city more of the people who come in for a day or two. They don't want to introduce two-headed girls, and hot frankfurts, and side-show barkers, and that kind of thing, but they would like a little more life.

Where-ee the Saloonge colony is up in arms, and two hundred of our best people have represented to the board that to Coney Islandize Easton's—

Would seriously detract from the value of the near by residence properties.

Would introduce an undesirable element of visitors, which would entail additional work upon the police to control.

Would ruin the beach as a safe and attractive refuge for children and invalids who use this branch of the opportunity to enjoy bathing.

Remembering that might be attracted to the proposed resort would include a resort of the class who would bring their luncheon with them only to leave it lying for the day, and that certain to be noisy, and to congregate in a way little or no money in Newport.

It would tend to encourage a desecration of the Sabbath and [illegible] general boisterous behavior.

Worry for Everybody.

So you see everybody in Newport has something big to worry about. Resident in Bellevue avenue is unanimously against popularizing or cheapening the beach. Down town there seems to be a divided sentiment. Those many would like to make Easton's more attractive to Newporters, there is some who would rather in the one day excursion, even in spite of the basket luncheons, at the expense of the Summer colony.

Just as the [illegible] is being pressed up to [illegible] speed for, who should pass the window but Hie Honor the Mayor, Patrick H. Boyle.

And the Mayor looks worried.

What can be troubling our popular chief magistrate?

Nothing much, except that his opponents are saying no one is that "Pat" has "cinch" this time.

Mayor Boyle is serving his fifth term as the head of the local government for New England, probably for the country, but he is being pressed hard by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, Ashley of New Bedford and a number of lesser lights in the party. The anti-Boyle forces should make good. And what he is doing or would do to defeat [illegible] then one is more.

Worry? Phooey! [illegible] Hempstead L. I., and to that I say it. Worry! We are the Worry Cyclists!

10,000 SEE THE CUBS TAKE REVENGE ON TENNEY'S RUSTLERS

Four Pitchers Unable to Check the Avalanche of Runs by the Champions, and They Win by the Score of 16 to 8

Rustlers Put Up a Game Fight and Tie Up an Early Lead by the Cubs, but the Pitchers Weaken; Big Crowd at Game

By R. W. LARDNER.

THE Cubs strengthened their grip on first place in the scrap for the National League flag by taking an awful fall out of the Rustlers in the final game of the series, while the Pirates and Giants were breaking even with their respective opponents. The score at the South End Grounds was 16 to 8, as nearly as can be reckoned at this time.

Loose Pitching.

All that was needed to send the Cubs away licked three times out of four was decent pitching. It was about when the roll was called. Hank Weaver tried to imitate it for a spell, but without success. Three solid smashes and a base on balls in the first inning influenced Mr. Tenney to remove Hank. Al Mattern didn't show anything to boast of, and he was yanked after the Cubs had given him a terrible beating in the third and fourth. Frank Xavier Pfeffer was the third candidate, and he got his in two seconds. If Weese F. X. sometimes called Jeff, was pretty well pleased with the day's happenings. The deal with Tenney was threatening to send him and George Tyler to New Orleans, was called off, because the Pelicans didn't want to ship Boss up here at this time. So Jeff and George are still Rustlers and Otto won't be one until next month. A lot of scouting is a hard thing for a pitcher to bear, but it doesn't compare with being sold down the river to New Orleans. Besides, Jeff knows that he can't be blamed for the result of the game.

Pfeffer Hammered.

Jeff retired at the end of the seventh and a new hope, Fuller Thompson, was trotted out. This youth was formerly a New York Giant and recently a member of the Elmira Club in the New York State League. The latter team liked him very much, but his salary was bigger than the income of the richest man in the town, so it was decided to let him go and keep the stockholders of the club out of the poor house.

Fuller Thompson—please don't separate the names—pitched the eighth and ninth and didn't allow a run. This was a wonderful feat when it is considered that Frank Schulte was one of the Cubs to face him. In fact Fuller Thompson caused Frank to hit feebly into a double play. One hit was made off Fuller Thompson. King Cole getting it in the ninth. This is no disgrace, for King's general appearance is enough to put any pitcher on the blink temporarily.

A crowd of 10,275 bugs turned out in appreciation of the Rustlers' recent brand. Said bugs expected to see the home team make the champions look sick, but they ought to have known better, for no Boston team lives up to expectations on Saturday.

Some Crowd.

There were so many people in the bleachers that I looked for a time as if some of them would have to be let out on the field. The ball isn't accustomed to such things and probably would have sunk in with the weight. The danger was averted by packing the fans into the stakes.

The crowd was very enthusiastic. It rooted hard for Boston and the way through and also gave Umpire Brenner some news about himself. He took it unkind.

A touching sketch, put on by Micky Doolin and his boomers put the Rustler in a serene. Micky was pursuing a high fly from far back in center field, but during the ground sprang up and jolted him in the shoulder. The result was a muff and also a run, with an escape for two more, for the Cubs. Micky was not to have fallen down if the hitter had been entered on the batting team of Planet South 2 Nero.

Henry Zimmerman got one of the two hits off Tenney. He made it on the heels of Mr. Tenney's first pitch. It came low, and Henry hit it on the nose. It went to Bill Rodgers, who threw to Mr. Merkle with two men on in the fourth.

Mrs. Schulte—there, the name slipped

Newsboys Hurt In Strenuous Game of Ball

Two of Them Carried to the City Hospital During Greater Boston Lads' Struggle.

So strenuous was the baseball game that the newsboys of Greater Boston played at the American League grounds yesterday afternoon, that two of them were knocked down and had to be treated at the City Hospital.

Jack Powers, nineteen, of No. 14 Fayette street, South End, was holding down the second bag and Bernard Gaschefsky, thirteen, of No. 103 Isabel street, Malden, was behind the bat. They collided running after a fly ball. The game was called. Aid was given by their fellow players and the police ambulance from the Roxbury Crossing station was called. At the hospital, Powers had a lacerated lip and Gaschefsky had a badly wounded forearm. Powers is seriously hurt.

The game was called off at the end of the fourth inning. At the time the Globers were on the long end of an 8 to 4 score.

Captures Three of Professional Events at Caledonian Meet.

FALL RIVER, Aug. 19.—Nearly 1,000 members of Scottish Clans from Boston, Providence, Pawtucket and this city attended the games of the Fall River Caledonian Society at the Athletic Field here this afternoon. J. Sullivan of Boston distinguished himself by winning the mile, quarter-mile and 100-yard professional events.

Inspired by the different medleys played by the Providence Fife and Drum Corps, the Scots performed valiantly in the different events. A feature of the day was the presentation of different Scotch dances by Misses Lillian and Mildred McFarland, Ethel Dacey and Mabel Galley, all of Pawtucket. The members of the Ladies' Auxiliaries entered into the spirit of the occasion, and the women's race of 75 yards was won by Mary Johnston of Pawtucket. Mildred Rowe came in second, and Carrie Gras captured third place.

John A. MacDonald, formerly physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., holder now of Bowdoin College, won nearly all of the principal events. The judges were Mayor Thomas F. Hughes, Alderman Walter E. McLane and Police Commissioner Frederick W. Lawson.

Rag race, won by Frank Towne; H. A. Sanderson, second.

DOYLE AND WAITT WIN.

Competitors Had to Don Their Oilskins to Avoid Spray.

BEVERLY, Aug. 19.—Eddie Doyle and Chester H. Waitt carried off the honors in the Jubilee Yacht Club power boat race this afternoon, winning the cup given by Edward S. Cameron, owner of the yacht Cactus II and a prominent member of the Jubilee Club. There was a good deal running and many had to don oilskins to keep off the spray. Emerson and White won second place, while W. H. Wolcott finished third, but was disqualified for starting before his gun, third place going to Fred Purinton.

Bundy Justifies His Rating by Beating Long.

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., Aug. 19.—Out playing his opponent, both at the net and deep court, Thomas A. Bundy, the Californian, today justified his rating of No. 2 by defeating his fellow Native son, Melville H. Long, by a score of 6-3, 6-2, 2-6, 5-7, 2 and 6-4. Bundy's victory was well won and to the majority of the gallery, which backed every point of advantage about the clubhouse and grounds, it seemed as though he could have brought off the result in three sets had he wished to do so.

Big Crowd Watches Games of Roxbury Organization at the Locust Street Grounds.

Amid the applause of the people of South Boston and to the stirring music from their own band, the officers and men of the famous Wilkesbarre Catholic Total Abstinence Regiment yesterday afternoon marched from their camp at Castle Island to the Locust street grounds, where they took part in the annual field day of St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Literary Society of Roxbury. The regiment, composed mostly of miners, left a marked impression upon the minds of the people of the Peninsular District.

More than 1,500 persons attended the field day, which was a pronounced success. Several companies of the regiment and the hospital corps gave exhibitions of how fires are fought and is rendered to the injured in battlefields in the Pennsylvania coal regions.

Two silk banners were put up by St. Patrick's Society for the best drilled team games. The judges were Lieutenant J. P. Galvin of the 56th Regiment, M. V. M., and Barry Keenan of Troop D, first squadron of Cavalry, M. V. M.

The successful companies were Company A of Wilkesbarre, Captain Joseph Ramsey, and Company D of Pittston, Captain J. J. Duffy.

BRADEN DIRECT SETS UP A NEW RECORD

Championship Sweepstakes Race Turned Out to Be a Farce.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 19.—The pacing division of the Kentucky Stock Farm stakes was the feature of the day at the Delaware Park this afternoon, the local driving club guaranteeing the stake to the contestants. The turf paper, which promoted the event, defaulted in the trotting division yesterday.

It proved to be a hot contest. Miss Braden Direct and King Dolphin were about equal choices in the betting.

In the first heat Braden Direct collided with Olive O'Byrne in the back stretch and his sulky was broken. Miss Bedford winning the heat easily.

Braden Direct was placed by the judges and went out and won the next two heats in a record [illegible] in the second heat, the record for the event.

The championship sweepstakes race was a farce, only Joan and Bruce Gibdle starting. The latter showed the effects of her hard race earlier in the week, breaking and never being able to make Joan extend herself.

Wood in Fine Form

Wood injured his control early in the game, but from then on he was in great form. Lajoie got two hits off him, but Wood was master of the situation at all times.

Harrison Played Good Game

The Red Sox played good ball and against such a series of hitters as Cobb, Lajoie Wagner and Jerkes don't it means something.

Harrison started the game with one out, but singled sharply down past Rigler. Bush and Wood were thrown out at first, Harrison taking second on the throw. Harrison scored on Speaker's hit. Hooper was caught napping on the play and doubled Speaker at second.

Lucky for Tigers.

The inning was a typical inning of the kind Wood has dealt out this season. Wood and Henriksen singled and Speaker sacrificed. Rigler walked, filling the bases. Lewis's drive was right to the infield. Who threw Wood out at the plate in time for Rigler to score and tighten the double lewis at first. In Jack's fourth Drake drew a base on balls. Cobb's grounder was taken away from Wood by this gave the Tigers a two run lead, but it cost more runs to increase it to the fifth.

Cy Young in Boston Again After a Career of Twenty-One Years

Released by Cleveland, the Famous Pitcher Comes Back to Play with Rustlers and Will Probably Pitch Tomorrow

His Wonderful Record So Far Excels All Others That It May Never Be Equalled in Baseball; Won Over 500 Games

"When I am no longer able to don a uniform, then alone shall I retire from baseball."

For reposing assertion was credited to Denton Tecumseh Young, familiarly known as "Old Cy," not more than two years ago.

The "Grand Old Man" of baseball is still able to don a uniform, and tomorrow he will probably pitch for the Boston Rustlers under his new contract. After an absence of nearly three years, Cy Young returns to the city where he made the greater share of his fame.

Denton Tecumseh Young holds the longevity record in point of service in the major leagues. There is none to dispute this claim. For twenty-one years "Old Cy" has been the base of batters both in the National and American Leagues. In that length of time Young has pitched no less than 812 games. Of this number he won 506. This is a record that is likely to stand the test for generations.

Matty After His Record.

Christy Mathewson, the great pitcher of the Giants, is the only one who seriously threatens to approach this mark. Mathewson has been in the game ten years and is now at the zenith of his powers. Whether or not he can stand the wear and tear of the constantly progressing game for ten more years is a big question. Mathewson's number of victories is close to 300.

It was on July 19, 1910, that Young attained his ambition. When he began his big league career in Cleveland twenty-one years ago, Young said that when he reached 500 victories, he would be ready to forsake baseball. That was twenty-one years ago. Last year, when Young reached the high water mark for victories he felt in such grand shape that he declared he could go on for twenty years more, and sincerely hoped to hang up a record of 1,000 victories. That was last year. Today Young is unable to pitch as of old. The Cleveland management realized that Young's usefulness has expired.

Young has the creed that he would never pay in the minor leagues. He is willing to do and can retire on his income and live comfortably for the rest of his natural life.

Pessimists at the outset of the season declared Young's end in the big league ranks found much trouble in rounding into shape during the training season, but he maintained that he would come around all right with the warm weather. Young caught cold before the season opened and for a while his condition was said to be serious. But his wonderful physique pulled him through. While there are any number of minor league clubs who would grab Young, even in his present condition, there is small likelihood of Young stalking to that level.

History points that many players become major leaguers at the age of twenty and are down and out when they hit twenty-five years old—a year after Young became a professional.

Twenty-One Years in the Game.

Young made his entree into the game words has given him world-wide honors twenty-one years ago, 1891. He pitched at Cleveland—his first and last love. Cleveland, then in the National League, claimed his services until 1899, when Young, pitching for the Spiders, as they here was short-lived, and in 1901 he joined the Boston Americans. Until 1908 Young pitched gilt-edged ball for the Red Sox and then John Taylor succeeded that Young's career as a kid leaguer was at an end. Young was traded to Cleveland and pitched there for two years.

Every season Cy's average has been better than that of his predecessor. At times the big leaguer has failed to win more than half of the games he pitched. In 1903 and 1904 Young's averages were .486 and .623, respectively. Last year Young again fell below the .500 mark, his percentage being .412. In all this time Young has issued 1,160 bases on balls, less than an average of one and one half to a game, and he has registered 2,701 strikeouts, an average of over three to a game.

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME.

Coronas and Centrevilles to Play Game for Purse.

BROCKTON, Aug. 19.—The Coronas and Centrevilles, two of the leading teams in the Brockton City Amateur Baseball League, made arrangements today to play a game of ball here next Saturday for the championship of the city and a purse of $100. There has been much rivalry between the teams in the league games this summer, and Manager Hugh McCaffery of the Centrevilles and Manager William Cafery of the Coronas say the coming game will be for blood.

Franklins Win.

In the Municipal series yesterday the Franklin A. C. walloped the Calumets, 28 to 5. The feature of the game was the daring base running of Stanton, Franklin's crack right fielder, who stole second, third and home twice in succession. The batting of Noble was also a feature of the game, he getting six hits for a total of thirteen.

The score:

Young's Advice to Players.

Don't use tobacco or drink beer.

Walk and run plenty; most players are too lazy.

Use as few curves as possible.

Pitch to the batter, and rely on your support.

Use the whole body in pitching, not the arm alone.

AMERICAN'S CONTEST MAKES HIT WITH BASEBALL FANS

Big Prize Offer the One Topic in Sport Circles Throughout New England — Major Leagues Rival Being Boomed for Place

What's the big topic of conversation among the baseball fans of New England? Is it the work of the Red Sox in the West, or the improvement shown by the Rustlers in their recent games at home?

No. The fans are talking about their favorites, but their chief interest at present is in the coming World's Series. They are wondering what two clubs will have the privilege of battling for the biggest title of all.

They are more interested than they have ever been before in this subject, and there's a reason.

The reason is the Boston American's big prize offer, which, in one short week, has become the talk of Boston and of every place in which this paper is read. Every fan has come to realize that he may be popular enough with Sonny AMERICAN to win one of the ten prizes which the American has hung up.

What are the prizes? Why, nothing less than free trips to the world's championship series, which is to be played in October at Philadelphia and Chicago, at Detroit and Chicago, at Philadelphia and Pittsburg, at New York and Philadelphia, at New York and Detroit.

Think of it.

World's Series Free of Charge.

You have a chance to see the world's series absolutely free of expense. The Boston AMERICAN is going to pay for everything, your railroad tickets, your sleepers, your rooms and meals and your reserved seat tickets. It costs you nothing in the way of money and hardly anything in the way of trouble and time.

In this edition you will find Sonny AMERICAN appears a coupon, good for ten votes. Clip it out and tell your friends to cut out the coupons in the issues of the Sunday AMERICAN. Wrap up your collection and send it to the World's Series Ticket Editor, care the Boston AMERICAN, Boston, with your name on the wrapper or envelope.

Your friends will do the same thing for you. Then be sure to get the coupon out of each issue of the daily AMERICAN good for one vote, and have that credited to your name in the usual way.

Before you know it, you will be right up in the race and all your friends and acquaintances will be giving you their valuable aid.

Easy to Win Prize.

The world's series is the event which all real baseball fans long to see. But, ordinarily, it costs so much to see it and there is so much trouble connected with the purchase of tickets and reservations in hotels and on trains. This has also given up in despair and are content to stay at home and depend on the papers for their news.

This will not be so for you if you are alive and if you are as anxious to take in the big event as you will be. All you have to ten fans receiving the largest number of votes will get the trip. Don't overlook a single coupon. Don't throw away any trouble or cost. The Boston AMERICAN is going to pay for it with no charge to you. So enjoy yourself and find you take in the whole show.

The man who started last Monday has a slight lead. You can catch up. Then another week is over if you begin at once and get your friends interested.

Remember the contest closes on the first day of October. Every one of the ten fans receiving the largest number of votes will get a free trip to the world's series. Remember all the coupons are good for one vote only. Don't throw away any coupons, although it's cruel they are to the other ones. Brown, a well outfielder, is suffering a horrible slump batting. Thompson, a good hitter but an erratic defensive player, is on the bench. How would it be to trade Thompson to-day's game and give Brown a rest? And Thompson will pull off some senseless play in the first day of October. Never mind. Remember that ends the game, and then you will have no more recourse from his blunders forever afterward. So Brown had better be left in.

Brown is left in. His strikes out a couple of times with the bases full, and worst of all he drops a fly ball for the real first time this season. Oh, dear. Why didn't we follow up that bunch and start Tuesday?

Then there's the tough pitching. Ames is obstinately refusing to lose. If you take a pitcher out when he shows as likely as not he will go right over and win the game. Ames to be a little worse. If you leave the pitcher in when he's not performing, he may go through the whole game and get all beaten. Now he's pitching fairly good ball, and may be through the whole game. Ames forth too late,

Tell It To Everybody!

The Baseball "Treat" of the Year

will be witnessed by some Ten AMERICAN Readers, without a single cent of expense to them. They will travel from city to city, wherever the entire set of games will be played, and will enjoy a tour at the expense of the AMERICAN that will be really worth while.

The conditions of this offer are absurdly simple. A Voting Coupon will appear in each issue of the AMERICAN, Daily and Sunday, up to and including October 1st. The ten (10) contestants who receive the largest number of votes will be awarded the trips. In the event of ties, the contestants so tied will each receive a similar trip.

Each Coupon in the DAILY AMERICAN will count for one (1) vote.

Each coupon in the SUNDAY AMERICAN will count for ten (10) votes.

Each coupon will be good only for one week from the date it appears in the AMERICAN and valueless after one week.

Everyone, irrespective of age or residence, is eligible. You simply have to get your friends to buy the AMERICAN, Daily and Sunday, and to save the vote coupon, which will be found printed therein, for you. This is absolutely all! You do not have to enroll or even send in your name. Just start TO-DAY and notify all of your friends that you are in the race and in TO WIN. Every live "fan" in New England should go after these trips. The winners will see all of the World's Series Games, wherever they may be played, and everything possible will be done to make the trip enjoyable for all. You will find it so easy to accumulate votes that the way your standing rises will amaze you. The way to go about getting votes in this contest is first to ORGANIZE YOUR FRIENDS INTO A VOTE-GETTING SOCIETY. Then let them set to work to get votes from all of THEIR FRIENDS. Victory in this contest means the popularity championship of New England, an honor almost as big as the winning of a big league pennant. All baseball enthusiasts will be on an absolutely equal footing. The ones getting the most votes will win! The standing of contestants, with their vote totals, will be printed from time to time in the Sunday AMERICAN.

One Time Trickiest Boxer in the Ring Thinks That He Has "Come Back" and Expects to Startle the Pugilistic World

NORMAN SELBY, otherwise Charles Kid) McCoy, known for years as the trickiest and possibly the most scientific boxer in the ring, has discovered the fountain of youth, either of life and secret of good health.

McCoy is ambitious to re-enter the ring and win the championship of the world from Jack Johnson. Many experts in mat- ers pugilistic will guffaw at this, and perhaps the kids and the press agents will [illegible] that if they never come back and that Mc- will be no exception to the rule, and he may be forced to the end and appear to the observer to be in better physical condition than ever, but that years of continued dissipation have left an indelible mark that no ring art has been sapped, and that he could not withstand the attacks of a younger pugilist.

All of which may or may not be true. Nevertheless, McCoy, within the short space of a few weeks, has accomplished some wonderful things that made food for comment. By persistent effort, he has brought himself to a condition of physical perfection. He has overcome many [illegible] habits that have been a drag upon him for years, and he has done it all [illegible]

A Wonderful Transformation.

At 47 years of age, after months spent in his Roxbury rathskeller, he measured more by an inch about the waist than he did at 21. At 47 he has a chest measurement 4 inches greater by nine inches than the girth of his waist. A year ago he weighed 176 pounds and was fat. To-day, [illegible] pounds. His bust and waist [illegible] He has [illegible] weight [illegible] and [illegible] he is looking [illegible] He could be accomplished all that.

Simple enough," said McCoy to an AMERICAN reporter who had applied there [illegible] and allowed himself as the [illegible] experiments. Anybody [illegible] If he will try. At 47 years of age I was [illegible] with all sorts of [illegible] troubles with harm- [illegible] my system and [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

GREAT RACING ON THE ELGIN ROAD COURSE

No Less Than Thirty-Four Cars Will Compete in Big Races at Elgin Ill. Friday and Saturday Next When it Is Anticipated Records Will Be Established at Various Distances

By J. C. KERRISON.

Practice work, under [illegible] County and Aurora Cup races, which will be held on [illegible] next, will commence tomorrow morning, when the [illegible] contestants in the several events will begin their [illegible].

The Elgin Trophy is, of course, the [illegible] considered as the premier event [illegible] warming up assisted for the Grand [illegible] held in Savannah in November.

These four events are [illegible] stock chassis and have been [illegible] national road races. The [illegible] which is of course the [illegible] held on Saturday next in [illegible] one of the speediest and best [illegible] contests that have ever been [illegible] the Elgin course.

Harry Grant of Boston made a [illegible] inspection over the course, and with a [illegible] AMERICAN as follows:

"The Lonestreet [illegible] pieces of roadway in the [illegible] For about three miles it is just as smooth as a billiard table. A mile of this includes the part in front of the grandstand is fifty four feet wide. The rest of it is from twenty to thirty feet wide. It is a road with a hard foundation and a little [illegible] not be afraid to travel his fastest on it.

"Here the speed will reach ninety to 100 miles an hour. The cars will run [illegible] or four abreast, and I predict that there will be some thrilling brushes on the part of the course, right where the spectators can enjoy them. There was a hill on the homestretch last year, but it was [illegible] away, thus increasing the speed possibilities."

The list of entries in the Elgin is one which should be productive of great speed and close competition while in the other three contests the cars although not as speedy as those in the big event are capable of rendering a good account of themselves and furnish interesting [illegible].

The entries for the several events are as follows:

MAN IN FUTURE WILL LIVE LIKE THE EAGLE

Men Will Live in the Mountain Tops, Like the Eagles, in the Days to Come. A Higher and Nobler Race Will Live and Think in the Purer Air of the Heights. Only Their Few Working Hours Will Be Spent in the Lowlands.

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner

THE condition of your blood changes when you climb to the mountain tops.

At the greater altitude come greater health and power, because in the high regions the change in the blood enables the system to resist the germs of disease.

And also, because in these higher regions of purer air, disease germs are fewer, and those that exist are weak.

THERE ACTUALLY OCCURS A CHANGE IN YOUR BLOOD WHEN YOU LIVE ON THE TOP OF A HIGH MOUNTAIN.

This fact has been announced and proved by scientists who have made careful tests of the blood of the same individuals, in the valleys, and on the heights.

The most decided change in the blood is the increase in the number of white corpuscles, the development in the blood of a far greater number of the defensive organisms called "phagocytes."

These "phagocytes" are the policemen, the defenders in our blood. Pumped by that wonderful engine, the human heart, all through our tissues, through the lungs, and through all the internal organs, these "phagocytes" attack the disease germs wherever they appear.

When a man is healthy and the blood good, the germs of diseases, tuberculosis, diphtheria, and the others, are attacked and destroyed as soon as they alight on the mucous membrane in the throat or mouth.

In other works these wonderful "phagoctyes," the soldiers on guard in our blood, attack disease germs and kill them, just as a faithful sheep dog attacks and kills the wolf that approaches the flock.

It is important for men to know that the blood is better, stronger in its resistance to disease on the great heights, and it is extremely encouraging, because a perfect human race will find its dwellings in the high places exclusively in a day not very distant.

Scientific proof that high atmosphere strengthens the blood makes us realize why it is important for all that can, and especially for children to spend a certain part of each year on the mountains.

The poor, unfortunately, cannot choose their location. But they can take comfort in the fact that in the future days no man will be so poor as to be tied to one spot. And many find satisfaction in the belief that this earth will be man's home as long as it lasts, and that men come back here over and over, millions of times, so that those that suffer here, and bear the burden now will return to live in a better day, in which the earth will be fully developed.

Only a dull mind can fail to perceive that the high places of the earth, now desolate and lonely, are in reality the future homes of a developed human race, homes that have been waiting in the silent majesty of the mountains all through the centuries, for man's intelligence to make him master of the earth and dweller on the mountain tops.

Man lives in the valley now because it is easier to stay there and work there. The mountains are high, roads are rare and very expensive. A few of the great have built their castles on the hills but only on the smaller hills. The great mountains, the magnificent Rockies, the towering mountains of Asia all the wonderful, beautiful heights, still wait to provide homes FOR THE WINGED MAN OF THE FUTURE. We that live to-day may be grateful that we have at least seen the first sprouting of man's wings. The adventurous and courageous are risking their lives showing us the way through the air where there is no road, where no road is needed.

A few years from now, and the roads on the earth's surface will be only for walking and for the hauling of the heaviest loads.

Men will walk and travel on the earth as little as does the eagle or the albatross. All distance travel will be in flight.

The homes will be on the mountains, and no roads will be needed. From one high point to another men will fly, breathing the pure air. They will descend into the valleys only for their hours of work.

And only a dull imagination can doubt that in the glorious days that await humanity on this planet work will be what it should be, a pleasure instead of a pain, and the hours of work will be as short as man chooses to make them. The machine which does not feel will do the labor. The water-falls, tides, and the heat of the sun will supply the power. No more digging of coal, or burning of wood.

MAN DWELLS ON THE SURFACE OF A GREAT DRIVING-WHEEL CALLED THE EARTH. He is the owner and inhabitant of one revolving cog in the cosmic machine. And that driving-wheel on which he lives will supply him with force, unlimited, the force that in his mental childhood he developed so pitifully with his feeble arms or the arms of slaves.

A man worth while lives in his thoughts. There is no thought more beautiful or encouraging than that of man's future, the future which humanity will owe to its own genius, to its own labor, suffering, patience, courage and perseverance.

That will be a real civilization, in the day when all of man's work will be with his brain, when a touch of the machine will set moving the great mechanical plows to tear up the plains, and machines to plant and reap the food of men; when men will go to and from their intellectual work in great flying machines, floating down into the fertile fields like great eagles, flying back to their beautiful homes on the mountain tops, where the air is purer and where thought is noble.

Far above any earthly vehicle will be those great wings of future man. Made of metal, flying through the atmosphere without friction or waste, they will last almost as long as the hills themselves. Once built they will be built for generations.

And from one generation to another, man will improve, as he becomes in the true sense of the word a breathing being, no longer tied down to the earth and the low, heavy atmosphere, but living his

Women in the Orient

—By—
Ella Wheeler Wilcox

A FRIEND sends me an article published in a prominent newspaper, from which the following extracts are taken. She writes in pencil over the article "I wonder if this is so." The title of the article is "Women in Oriental Lands." The writer's name is not given but the sex is undoubtedly masculine:

"More than thirteen centuries ago Mohammed set man and woman on an equal footing. Women are your companions, he said to men 'God has given you them, you must aid and protect them.' Companions! I beg you to consider the scope of that word and to bear with me while I note the difference between it and 'slave.'

"This precept of Mohammed's has been slightly commented upon by jurists and codified by legal scholars. To-day the Mussulman girl is at all points the equal of her brothers, and receives the same education. Under the law she may be regarded as a woman at fourteen. She is really a woman at seventeen.

"Moslem women are as free to go and come as their husbands and their brothers are. To be sure, they wear veils. Do you think they are the worse for that? After all, the powder and rouge that are so fashionable in the Occident—are they not a veil of another sort, hiding realities about as effectually?

"The Moslem woman, then, is neither a slave nor a martyr. In the home she is her husband's helpmate in every way and the respected mother of his children. At court she has sometimes played a leading role of extraordinary skill, and to the admiration of all beholders. History records names forever renowned—Sultana Kousem Valde, Sultana Safiye, the illustrious Roxane, and that exquisite Mal Khatoun, daughter of the celebrated Professor Edel Ali, a woman as gifted as she was widely informed, who was Sultan Osman's best adviser, and the good angel of his son, Sultan Orkhan, one of the most learned princes the Oriental Empire ever had.

"Polygamy is barely tolerated Mohammed, as he had to deal with customs of long standing and with climatic influences and a stage of transition, allowed a man four wives, but no more. Moslems never abuse the tolerance. You will hardly find one Ottoman in a thousand who is a polygamist. I wish the ladies of the Occident would step and ponder this."

No more misleading words relative to the condition and position of women of the Orient ever went into cold type than those quoted above. In the Winter of 1909-10 I passed some months among the Mohammedan people of Northern Africa. Algiers, Tiberia, Tunis, Sidon, Bone and Cheima. Mohammedan towns scattered along the Desert of Sahara.

During that time I talked with more than fifty representative men of Mohammedan faith—men of the lower, middle and upper classes, from the handsome bold half-savage guide to the merchant, the official, and finally, the son in law of the Bey.

All the men in that portion of Africa speak some language beside their own; many of them speak a little English, and most of those holding any position above that of the serving class, speak French. It was my good fortune to be received into several homes and to meet the women; these women who are described as being 'free and independent' and "comrades of their husbands" and the "equals of their brother."

Only two women did I meet who could speak any language save their own, and those two belonged to the Ouled Nail tribes, who fill the office of licensed courtesans and dance every evening in the dance halls, described by Robert Hitchens in his wonderful prose epic, "The Garden of Allah."

It is almost impossible for any woman to become educated in the Orient (where Mohammedism reigns), unless she breaks free from all conventions and lives the life of the "Ouled Nails" and her kind. Every Mohammedan man with whom I talked regarding the questions, expressed his belief that woman's best interests necessitated her being kept in strict seclusion.

"My wives never go out," said one of our guides. "I have two, and they live in separate houses because they have in some way found out the foolish ideas of the Christian people regarding the old customs. But they keep at home and never step outside the Parem walls. So, soon as a woman begins to gad about she becomes restless, so long as she stays at home, she is satisfied."

Afterwards the man took me to call upon both wives and acted as interpreter while I talked with them. One wife lived in the house with his mother, sister and aunt, a large square structure built about an open court, with the separate apartments for the women opening from each side.

All the ladies came out to meet me, and all examined my apparel with the freedom of small children, mingled with the curiosity of kittens. The wife was a woman of twenty-nine or thirty, was particularly interested in my bronze slipper.

Later, to amuse the ladies, I read their palms, and found a line in the hand of the wife indicating that some wish of ambition would be gratified near the age of forty.

When the husband translated my remark, the wife looked pensive, then replied that she had no wish or ambition that she could recall, save to possess my slippers, and she feared she would be too old at forty to enjoy them.

This gives a very clear expression of the order of mind possessed by the average Mohammedan woman. She thinks only of what she eats, drinks and wears; and, mentally, she is a combination of a domestic animal and a child.

Our guide spoke three languages and had traveled extensively. I said to him, after visiting the second wife, "These wives you keep in seclusion can be no companions to you; they know nothing of the world as you know it; they are little children mentally."

"We do not want women to be our companions," he replied. "Their place is at home with the family, it is quite wrong to educate women; then they want to be gadding about the world."

In another larger and more pretentious home I met three of the wives of a rich merchant tailor. One had her apartments on the west side of the court; one on the east; the other on the south. A French lady whose mother was an Algerian accompanied me and acted as interpreter. She told me many things of these women.

The husband was well educated; the wives wholly uneducated. The girls rarely attend school after the age of ten years; and their lives are restricted to the house and garden. The middle and higher classes never go out, even to the shops; but servants bring goods to the harem for their inspection, or to the closed carriage where when they at rare intervals, attended by many servants, take a drive. I saw these hearse-like carriages with curtains closely drawn, and realized that the inmates could obtain no more than a breath of air through veils and screens, and did not wonder that the drive was not a daily recreation.

Better the open court of the harem and the unveiled face and free air. In Chertma, I visited a house and met eight women, varying in age from sixteen to thirty-five, the youngest being the beautiful Zorah, wife of the young attorney of the little aristocratic city of the Desert of Sahara, which takes pride in having no European residents. Zorah was the only wife, her husband being but twenty-two years of age. With her were six wives of her husband's three brothers, and another woman, whose exact station was not divulged. There was the same curiosity regarding the customs of callers, and the same utter lack of mental or spiritual development in all save the one mysterious woman, who seemed to be suffering from some grief, which gave her face an inexpressible melancholy, and caused her to be listless and distrait, even when experiencing the unusual event of receiving foreign callers. The young attorney assured me that none of these ladies ever went beyond the home walls, except at rare intervals to drive in the shrouded manner described.

He thought it the only way for respectable women of the Orient to live. One Mohammedan, who was a traveler and linguist, told me he had divorced four wives and still possessed two.

A visit to the divorce court, any day, found business brisk, and the facility with which a Mohammedan man obtains a divorce would delight the heart of New York's "Four Hundred."

These are FACTS, easily proved by any one who chooses to study the conditions of Mohammedan women in Northern Africa.

That women are contented in this dwarfed and smothered situation is no argument for the continuation of such conditions. Healthful discontent has always been the herald of PROGRESS. The statement that polygamy did not count more than one among a thousand Mohammedans will not bear investigation. While it is true that Mohammedan men are beginning to feel a certain pride in saying they have only one wife, this feeling is the result of modern thought and rapid transit, and is taking root only in minds of men who come in contact with the great world.

Away from the centres, far from the ports, polygamy thrives, and even the Bey of Tunises having lost one of his two wives in 1909, was occupied in looking for her successor in 1910.

The optimistic gentleman who wrote the article from which the above extracts are taken needs to look a little more deeply into the facts before he makes such sweeping assertions and send them broadcast over the world.

How to Write Well

By ELBERT HUBBARD

To write well counts as much in [illegible] as it does in more did. However, just because [illegible] to read or write well. Being a man of force and not a man of [illegible] but always holds fast to the problem after this manner. "My friends, this subject naturally divides itself under three heads, firstly"—here he states some general proposition—"secondly" [illegible] about in his mind for the other two. Having secured these, he launches forth with the definite statements as some other glib and [illegible]

But what has never left me is the impression [illegible] could never dress from one effort to be "clear," "forceful" or "elegant" [illegible] Saxon, forsooth! A dead force, it has no more place in [illegible] than has speed.

Power in art there surely is, but power is quite a different thing from force. Power is that quality by which things is wrought. It means potency. The artist [illegible] only a machine. Force moves works his changes by the powder that he never explodes; while force means movement, action, exertion, violence, compulsion.

"Courteous shown or will to the maker of directions, force to the artisan; and "elegance" to the girl at the button counter. Cultivate the heart and intellect [illegible] and force will come. For, while it is still a [illegible] whether a man's offspring are heirs to his mental and spiritual qualities, it is very sure that the children of his love are partakers in whatsoever virtue his soul possesses.

Let the writer know a vivid idea of what he is going to say and clearly expressed so that it is at the moment clear to his other self; then self looks on over the shoulder of the writing self and sees that nothing has been set down but thought and deed.

PAUL MICHEL, neat, inconspicuous, very like a middle class French tourist, was at the table d'hote enjoying the dinner which he [illegible] had been well cooked. Also he was enjoying the thought of [illegible] upon which he would presently ring the bell for the [illegible] to come and [illegible] him, and to himself, was no more than a prologue; but it was rather a brilliant prologue.

Since arriving Michel had accomplished a good deal. He had [illegible] out the fact that Miss Verney had been [illegible] Ricardo and Miss Verney from Chamounix, was not at St. Pierre de Chartreuse of the neighborhood, though the impression had been created in the Chamounix hotel that the ladies' carriage was coming from St. Pierre. No one at the latter place knew anything about the [illegible] except that he was a stranger; and Michel's suspicions amounted almost to certainty now [illegible] A stranger was out for Jim Barr's scalp—to [illegible] therefore Mr. [illegible] could get an order for the man's extradition by the French police for the [illegible] was, to prove identity, and the detective knew that he would be laughed at, rather than pitied, if he were unlucky enough to make a mistake.

Having discovered that the driver was a stranger, Michel went immediately to the local police, with a letter from high authorities in Paris. He stated his suspicions concerning the dark young man who spoke Italian, and who was merely [illegible] the adoption of that language.

It would be difficult for a foreigner to pose as a Frenchman in France, whereas a dandified Italian might [illegible] but not be criticised; and a lucky knowledge of Italian, shared by two ladies, had given the young man a great advantage in carrying out a disguise.

Michel's new colleagues, deeply interested, agreed with him in thinking that [illegible] day in confirming his suspicions, the man could easily be trapped without [illegible] further trouble. [illegible] and if it [illegible] he had hired the carriage and horses from some person not above accepting a bribe, he would be [illegible]

If he had borrowed his licence it would be [illegible] and could be traced in time of the coachman. The fellow would [illegible] if unable to satisfy the police he [illegible] in their hands until [illegible] had disinterred the cards.

First Step Arranged

All being settled between the men it was arranged that [illegible] should not be [illegible] Saturday morning, unless the detective from Scotland Yard made a fortunate coup meanwhile; but of doing [illegible] had [illegible]

He said to himself that the end of his [illegible] at hand, and that he would [illegible] Miss Verney a check. Evidently Miss Ricardo was [illegible] for that the meeting was [illegible] between the [illegible] was arranged [illegible]

He thought the girl was evidently [illegible] for [illegible] of her lover. She would [illegible] to have the man [illegible] would [illegible] him well, he would [illegible] Jim Barr. # ANTI-DIVORCE FETES LATEST IN SOCIETY

Of Course One Has to Be Discreet in Making Out Guest List.

PROVES REAL DIVERSION

Smart Set Kept Busy at Newport, Bar Harbor and Other Resorts.

"Anti-Divorcee" is the latest society fad.

The [illegible] established for the first time [illegible] Philadelphia.

Newport is seriously thinking, after its great furore over sunday engagements and other circumstances in, and out of "what set" subsides, of trying one of these innovations.

At an "Anti-Divorce Afternoon" the hostess presents to her guests a program of entertainment or instruction, whichever one pleases to term it, which follows the line of thought suggested by the title. This program may take the shape of readings, a playlet or even a moving picture show, illustrating the sorrows, likewise the deplorable prevalence, of divorce in high life.

Moving pictures at a smart assemble may seem in strangely bad taste in incongruous, but society delights in incongruity, properly prepared. It is a "diversionist," as they would say on the Continent, to have some cheap and popular amusement staged in aristocratic drawing room or Summer place.

One Must Be Discreet.

Of course, the hostess has to choose her guests discreetly. One may not go inviting all one's personal friends to a divorce session or an anti-divorce one, either. One is far too apt to make a great the wrong way.

But what [illegible] in making up the list [illegible] Anti-Divorce Afternoon" promises to hold attention till the next diversion, since it is [illegible] several of the more engrossing problems in the Newport cottage [illegible] are regarding the idea.

Society, from Newport to Bar Harbor does not lack food for talk. The Astor-Lowe engagement, with its ecclesiastical condemnation, the Clemos-Sherman betrothal, the Sousa-Vanderbilt romance (it is not getting a recent marriage which seems to go daily discussing—all these are table talk supposed "silly season" gossip over in April.

In fact, it was not till Waldorf Astor stepped on to London the other day that society was [illegible] the silly season being [illegible] that society recalled that [illegible] year to be [illegible] and various [illegible] gossiping, the dissolute and gossip, [illegible] are a number of legitimate events to speak, which are engaging attention at Newport, the North Shore and Bar Harbor.

Bar Harbor Horse Show.

Bar Harbor is looking forward to its horse show. The dates are August 22, 23 and 24. For the first time in several years the president of the Bar Harbor Horse Show Association, General Edward Moale, has [illegible] to [illegible] Bar Harbor [illegible] has extra expenses to the [illegible] the [illegible] are [illegible] and betting it is [illegible] to get up the list of [illegible] and [illegible] prizes [illegible] L. Two days after the Bar Harbor horse show closes comes the annual private dinner of Judge Mason of Chicago, at the Straw's manor place, "Roseangre," Lake Cheseaut. This will take place on August 26 on the private track of the Maine estate. Invitations to that are now [illegible] welcomed.

The Newport horse show does not come till September, but advance notes are being sounded already. Judge and Mrs. Mason have secured their pen for the Newport show. Other early Newport [illegible] are Miss Martha Codman and Mr and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence.

Normandy Market Day.

The younger set along the North Shore is peculiarly keen just now on its plans to appear at the "Normandy Peasant Market," which is to take place on the grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacon's Myopia [illegible] on Friday, September 1. This market is [illegible] the benefit of the Simsbridge Day Nursery, one of the most popular charities [illegible] Mrs. Bacon and her aid [illegible] Mrs. Winthrop R. The dashing naval officer was feted in and about Beverly this week. Four battleships of the North Atlantic squadron were in the inner harbor, and society—more especially the society girl—made as much as possible of the gallant designers. In the line of thrilling events maybe ought to be placed one of the most delightful receptions that Mrs. Edward Preble Gardner, Jr., has ever given in Beverly in the line of entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner have as their guests Rear Admiral Ward, division commander, Captain Hutchins, aide of Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, and several other lieutenants of the division. Major William E. ## MR. GALVIN'S ARTICLE ON IRELAND

Glasnevin; Where Ireland's Great Dead are Sleeping

Noble Martyrs and Lovers of Erin are Buried There

What the Historic Keenan Movement Did for the Cause of Irish Freedom.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

An afternoon spent in a leisurely walk through the well kept and sanded avenues of Glasnevin cemetery in Dublin becomes a rare source of delight to the particular meditation of the most profitable kind. Every foot of ground within the gates is sacred to Irish nationality and Irish genius, and every grave is the monuments of exquisite design reared as tributes to Ireland's illustrious dead.

One sees the memorial and last resting place of such children of Ireland as Daniel O'Connell, Charles Stewart Parnell, Denis Florence McCarthy, James Clarence Mangan, John Blake Dillon, Thomas Clarke McManus, John Keegan Casey, Anne Devlin, Lord O'Hagan, Rev. Joe Cahill, whose body was carried back to Ireland from Boston; P. J. Smyth, Alexander Martin Sullivan, Sir John Gray, Cardinal McCabe, Barry Sullivan, Hussey Vivian Burke, Lady Chart ris Mahon, Dr. John O'Donovan, Eugene O'Curry, Lady Shell, Sir Michael O'Loughlin, Lord Gerard, Michael Angelo Hayes, Sir Dominic Corrigan, Sir Hercus Norris, Jack Thomas Parker, Sir Robert Dwyer Joyce, who lived and practised here in Rutland Square; Dr. Joseph Paul MacKinley, Master and Joseph Hively, Kate Daly, Lady Murray, Edmund Dwyer Gray, Sir Robert Shaw, Sir William Carroll. The O'Gorman Mahon, Professor Stewart, John George McCarthy, Sir James Mackay, Sir Patrick Keenan, Henry Loftus Robinson, Rev. James Healy, Bishop Duggan, Mrs. Della Parnell, mother of the great leader and daughter of Commodore Stewart of the U. S. Constitution, Dr. Joseph Kenny, and hundreds of others, all eminent in peace or in politics, or in art and science.

There are at least two monuments in Glasnevin which mark graves that have no tenants. They are to the memory of two by warm and patriotic friends to honor the memory of Allen, Larkin and O'Brien, the Manchester martyrs, and of Patrick O'Donnell, who was hanged in London. The bodies of those men were interred in the yard of the jail where they were executed, but stately monuments in Glasnevin tell the story of their lives and sacrifices.

O'Connell's Great Memorial.

The most impressive thing in the great national cemetery is the round tower to Daniel O'Connell. It is 150 feet high, built of granite and is in the form of an Irish round tower. A winding stone staircase inside leads to the little chapel which the crypt really is are the cut-stone remains of mortuary of O'Connell's family. The body of the great emancipator lies in a sarcophagus before the marble altar.

O'Connell died in Genoa, July 15, 1847, while he was travelling to Rome. As he was about to breathe his last he murmured:

"My soul to heaven, my heart to Rome my body to Ireland." The words of this dying request are carved on marble panels above the altar in the crypt.

Dublin was in mourning when O'Connell's remains arrived from Genoa. The coffin rested four days in the cathedral while preparations for the pomp funeral were being completed. The transfer of the body to Glasnevin was a triumphal march to the reception given by the people of Paris to the bones of Napoleon when they were brought home to France from St. Helena.

In the procession the coffin rested on a bier drawn by six horses. The magnificent car on which O'Connell stood as the multitude escorted him to his tomb after his release from Richmond Prison a short time before, followed the bier. There were a long line of Catholic notables, bishops, priests and people in the procession, and the mechanics of Dublin. As the funeral passed many Catholic clergymen fell on their knees, raising crosses on the Lord's Prayer in Latin, and half-naked Irish sailors manned the cards as a mark of respect to the illustrious dead. Thousands of people came to Glasnevin in three days and all were of heads, but despite the enormous throng not a single decorum marked the solemn occasion.

Although the death of O'Connell occurred in 1847, his remains were not placed in the crypt beneath the magnificent memorial in Glasnevin until May 14, 1869. The transfer of the body from its temporary resting place was attended by a ceremony almost as solemn as the public funeral of a score of years before.

Father John Keenan, the great Irish patriot priest, [illegible] was pastor of Maynooth when he was [illegible] bishop of Lismore, and [illegible] was present in [illegible] when [illegible] was gathered [illegible] around [illegible] people repeating [illegible] the words [illegible] of the Irish Rosary for the repose of his great orator. Father Burke said [illegible]

His glorious victory and honor given to those whom he vanquished. He honored them by appealing to their sense of justice and of right and to the age of Catholic emancipation had acknowledged the power of a people, not only to suffer, but to reclaiming for the liberty of the soul the blessing which was born with Christ, and which is the inheritance of the nations that embrace the cross. Catholic emancipation was not the herald and the harbinger of victories. He who was the chaplain liberator and more than one, was also the father of Ireland's statesmen and patriots.

For Ireland he lived, for Ireland he died. On the shores of the Mediterranean, the weary soldier lay down to sleep. He had led a mighty nation to the opening of "a new world" and directed her first and doubtful steps on the path of the high destinies to Ireland. He had ever longed to

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TOUR GREAT AD FOR BOSTON IN EUROPE

Foreign Business Men By the Score Coming to Hub for International Convention to Be Held Next Year

Mayor and Mr. Fahey Have Promised Visitors Free Trip to Principal Cities.

By F. J. McISAAC.

Special Representative of the Sunday American with the Chamber of Commerce party in Europe.

ZURICH, Aug. 6.—The Chamber of Commerce tour is practically completed and it is now time to "count up," as they say in theatrical business, to find out how we stand, what success we have had.

There isn't any doubt whatever that in stimulating interest in the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce at Boston in 1912 the tour has more than realized expectations.

What nobody was looking the Americans, who turned up at the London congress two years ago unexpectedly strong, swiped the congress, and the Europeans found they would cross the Atlantic if they wished to attend the next one.

They shrugged their shoulders, many of them, and said, "Very well, but we shall not attend." The Boston congress stood as even odds or chance of being a treat.

But [illegible] put a different face on it. [illegible] handed to Bostonians for to [illegible] from other cities [illegible] proposal to invite [illegible] Boston to attend the Boston congress has awakened their interest.

Besides, we have promised them—well, I'd hate to tell you all John H. Fahey and Mayor Fitzgerald have promised them on behalf of Boston, Massachusetts and the United States—I shall let them break it to you gently.

But a special train which will start the whole ball rolling in favor of the Boston convention to all the great American cities free of charge is only one of the inducements. I am afraid some of the Europeans think a free passage to America and return is also included.

Big Delegation Coming.

Scores of business men in London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, especially Vienna, and Budapest have given their word that they will attend the congress, and there isn't the slightest doubt in the minds of any of us [illegible] will be one grand success.

The [illegible] been the finest and [illegible] ever staged. We Americans [illegible] by heard we were coming [illegible] to read up on us [illegible] a name as well known [illegible] in every household in Europe as [illegible] and about 10,000 Parisians [illegible] are wearing the Boston badge. Those [illegible] were when we left Paris.

Vienna, I suspect, is the only small [illegible] which the history of a place and [illegible] to wonder and doubt [illegible] thoughtless. You ought to hear [illegible] New York [illegible] Hamburg, Budapest, [illegible] when they [illegible] Bunker Hill and Lexington and [illegible] New York could show your [illegible] them as they were an hour before [illegible] blackthread paper [illegible] Long [illegible] buried in the Teutonic [illegible] the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Great Boom for Boston.

The [illegible] doubt about it Boston got a great [illegible] a result of the tour.

It's now [illegible] the other features of the trip, the studies we were to make, sociological, governmental and otherwise, and how we all coming home as municipal ownership converts.

Remember the poem about the blind men that went to see the elephant and each grabbing a different part of the brute could not agree upon a description?

Well, their case is a very like our own. Devoting only a few days to each city, we could not get any real knowledge of condition. It was a case of ask questions of the first citizen you happened to be introduced to and take his statements as gospel. And as the opinions of different citizens differed the Americans came away [illegible] information that could hardly be called accurate.

We were certain things that were self-evident, Hamburg's docks, Dusseldorf's parks, Munich's palaces, Berlin's activity, [illegible] Budapest's energy and natural [illegible].

Of [illegible] we said to take no horrors. We [illegible] a lot of [illegible] and [illegible] and we were told they never ran over anybody which was obvious, and that [illegible] was not [illegible] with [illegible] blamed of them, but insteed [illegible] points from their curalogs.

We were assured everywhere that there was [illegible] in American public officials, would assure us there was no graft, but we have time to investigate our own [illegible] and we were in too much of a hurry in Europe.

Everywhere people said: "But you should spend a month in this city before you can learn the true conditions," and we had to explain that really we were not extending a tour, but were just passing [illegible].

A Lincoln Steffens Speech.

Nevertheless I have no doubt that one or two of the literary guests who were along will have the nerve to write books about what they had learned during the voyage.

One Lincoln Steffens was very much in evidence during the voyage, but only got a chance to use one speech, at Munich. I [illegible] was wrong in two languages. On [illegible] spoke German. A few days before the banquet he was busy with [illegible] German dictionary, and thus he [illegible] the Germans in their own tongue. [illegible] Steffens is blessed with a natural [illegible], dialect not warranted, and when [illegible] the Americans what he had said.

The [illegible] of the song was that the [illegible] used to be [illegible], but now is humble and meek and wants to sit at [illegible] foot and occasionally lick its boots. If the Germans would kindly send a few over to America we would cheerfully show how rotten we are.

It was impossible to let Lincoln over the head with agreeing because there were Germans present and we could not quarrel in public. But after the luncheon was over Richard Teeling, E. C. Hultman and several other boosters protested to the committee in the most emphatic manner were taken through the government print-against permitting any more such patriots to air themselves.

[illegible] and it was thought he might have met with foul play until a letter was received from him in London, whither he had gone to get his annual bale cut from the rear bumper that he allows to touch his hair and whiskers.

In Vienna the committee allowed M. C. Hultman, the Boston engineer, to speak at a banquet, and during his remarks he notified the muckraking contingent, which was numerous enough, that there must be no more washing of dirty linen in Europe. The Viennese were quite in the dark as to the real meaning of the speech, because Mr. Hultman conveyed his warning by telling the Viennese how sorry he was that only the cheap muckraking American magazines can be found in Europe, and not those that reflect credit upon the country.

Faheys Remain in Paris.

During the voyage home the various committees and Mr. and Mrs. Fahey will not return to Boston with the party which arrives August 23, but will remain in Paris for some weeks longer.

Mr. Fahey professes himself entirely satisfied with the success of the tour and the success is really due in great part to his tact and good judgment and his ability to encourage between the various factions represented in the party. His speeches have always been diplomatic and inspiring, and while most of our other orators have been cheerfully panned by various groups all have agreed that Fahey never put his foot in it.

Mr. Fahey and Mrs. Fahey will not return to Boston with the party which arrives August 23, but will remain in Paris for some weeks longer.

MAYOR LOST HIS CHECK; PUT OUT AT BANQUET

BUDA PEST, July 30.—"Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" is the name of a favorite Strauss waltz. The Boston Chamber of Commerce tourists know now what it means. For three days and three nights they have been in the hands of the lively Viennese.

A reception committee met us when the train pulled into the station. There were nearly thirty members and each wore a welcoming smile and a large bouquet which he immediately presented to one of the visiting ladies.

Every one of them spoke good English and had the most serious conception of the duties of a member of the reception committee. It was to attach himself to a small group of Americans and never leave them save for a few hours at night until the escorted them to the parting train three days later.

Strenuous Social Programme.

The program began right away quick. It consisted of twenty-three events, all to occur in three days, and included three luncheons, two teas and three banquets.

Each of the reception committee proved his own assistant for the use of the Americans and immediately after breakfast took them for a tour of the city.

Every city knows that Vienna is one of the loveliest cities in Europe. Its palaces, galleries, churches and public buildings are very numerous. We saw them all and turned up at noon at the Industrial House, a palace which is the headquarters of the Manufacturers and Merchants and is quite distinct from the Chamber of Commerce.

Arthur Kniffler, president of the Austrian Central Association of Manufacturers and President of the Reception Committee, then delivered an address on industrial conditions in Austria.

He explained that the Austrian manufacturers were handicapped in comparison to their competitors from the superiorness of the labor unions on one side and the agrarian interests on the other. He showed the prosperous progress of Austria in the very flourishing style.

Immediately after came a luncheon followed and the party divided for the afternoon. Some went out to the Imperial Palace at Schonbrunn and others accepted the Governors' invitation to visit the fleet of craft maintained by the city on the banks of the Danube.

Shade Trees for Bathers.

This bath is an enormous beach affair on an island in the river, where the bathers are shaded by tall trees. It contains a large restaurant and has many other features.

Women unaccompanied by men and men without women cannot use this particular bath, which is supposed to be for the families.

The first [illegible] of a couple Bostonian on entering the [illegible] with is to yell for the police. The second is to blush.

Whenever I hear the band playing the "Blue Danube" after this I shall blush, and one of our uniforms [illegible].

In the evening it was the turn of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry to entertain and instruct, and Frederick Wilfort, municipal engineer, talked on Vienna's town planning, of which few European cities have done more.

There followed a banquet and the customary speeches. If I do not report many speeches it is because they are mostly expressions of international good feeling and politeness.

Promptly at 10 o'clock Saturday morning the reception committee turned up with their families and the Bostonians started in some of them had been up late dancing the unofficial [illegible] waltz, and it took a long time to get the Americans what he had said.

Today there was a visit to the "An hour" bread factory, a great Vienna institution, and some [illegible] shopping.

During all this time it was hot as a furnace, and several young gentlemen called the afternoon program and trekked to the family bath.

For this they were properly punished. While they were in the water a thunder storm burst and the rain quickly chanced to hail. The bathrooms were big as marbles and they pelted upon the swimmers, driving them from the water and into their dressing rooms. And when they hit they hurt and sometimes cut.

It hasn't been hot since. The hail storm broke the hot spell.

In the afternoon part of the visitors

Supper in Fine Park.

The Austrian ministers of Public Works, Commerce and Railways took a hand in the entertainment with a supper in the Sach [illegible], one of Vienna's finest parks.

It was a pretty full day but after the supper and the speeches nothing would do the reception committee but we must see the Prater.

"The Prater" is the Coney Island of Vienna. It is located on the banks of the Danube and is in two parts. One is called the Common Prater, which is a long street lined with flying horses, scenic railroads, coffee, beer gardens, moving picture houses and cheap theatres, where the common people go.

"The other is called "Venice in Vienna" and was formerly filled with canals, and islands the; were reached by gondolas, with a separate show on each island.

Somehow the gondolas didn't take, so they filled in the canals. It is now like Luna Park in many respects, but it includes several chautauqua, where very wood songs and dances are given.

There is an open air theatre, in which two Scotch comedians were conversing in Lowland English to an audience that did not understand a word but laughed uproariously, apparently at the kilts.

The American army were very much in evidence at the Prater, and handsome officers were continually saluting.

Sunday morning brought the reception committee with it and at 10 a. m. the program resumed. First it was the Hofburg Palace and the Art Gallery, and then the beautiful suburb of Stebling where the Lower Austrian Board of Administration was the host at luncheon. Followed inspection of the National Library and Attendance Institutions instituted by [illegible] Theresa, schools, etc., all most [illegible] located.

Trip to the Mountains.

From Steinhof the party went [illegible] through the mountains [illegible] took the city winding up at Cobenzl, where there was tea.

During the journey we noticed a new variety of trolley car and we have already seen 5 of them in Europe. They have a trolley is laid in a slot in the left hand track, a best and effective system.

The three days in Vienna concluded with a grand banquet given by the four burgomasters, count them, four, of Vienna in the City Hall.

You could place the Boston City Hall [illegible] six times in Vienna's Rathaus, and in other respects they compare as well as a barn and a palace.

TRADE TOURISTS ENJOY SIGHTS OF BUDAPEST

BUDAPEST, Aug. 2.—Budapest, the capital of the kingdom of Hungary. Here is the most eastern point of our journey, a city which the American who doesn't know intelligently thinks is old, slow and quiet to enjoy.

Actually it is in many respects the most modern and progressive city in Europe.

Budapest had the first underground, the first suspension bridge, the first underground railway line, and it is keeping right up with the procession to-day. Sometimes it is a little ahead.

Here is the world's only telephone newspaper.

When a man becomes a subscriber—and [illegible] costs only $6 per day—the telephone installs an apparatus with receivers for both ears but no mouthpiece. It is for hearing purposes only.

There is also a program by which one can tell just what kind of news is being disseminated at every hour.

Can Hear the Opera.

Not only do the subscribers get the news but they can listen to the opera or the drama from their own rooms, for this wonderful journal has placed receivers near the stages of the principal theatres and perfected their pans until it is possible to hear with great distinctness.

The telephone newspaper has a regular staff of reporters who secure the news in the ordinary way and prepare copy for the announcer.

The announcer talks to 15,000 people at once. I do not think the telephone has reached such a state of perfection any where else.

Aside from putting the newspapers out of business the telephone journal has got [illegible] the telephone [illegible] and beautiful buildings including a fine [illegible] university recently erected on vacant land [illegible] by the municipality. The [illegible] grade here [illegible] is quite certified to Frank A. Vanderlip, the head of the City Trust, and explained.

Budapest is [illegible] of a site Technology ought to have. We could place it along the Charles bank by narrowing the river a little more."

Mr. Bourne Agrees.

And Bourne was forced to agree that it would be fine for Tech. There was a great deal of activity on the Danube. The entire river bank on both sides was used as a quay, and for [illegible] which go all the way down to Odessa and Constantinople were moored or in motion [illegible] one of the shores was [illegible]

[illegible] finally had we [illegible] in the chamber of Commerce [illegible] when we started again [illegible] and [illegible] steamed by a pavilion [illegible] affair. A [illegible] which is very steep [illegible] feet high, but no [illegible] cars by many miles [illegible].

This mountain is [illegible] the line of Margaret favorite resort of [illegible] Island was [illegible] city next afternoon.

It seems to us a [illegible] a mile wide and [illegible]

The Bostonians Homeward Bound

MOST of the delegation of the Boston Chamber of Commerce who have been touring Europe are homeward bound. They sailed from Cherbourg for New York on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on Thursday and will arrive in Boston, via New York on Wednesday.

On sailing the party expressed themselves as very much pleased with the hospitality they have met with everywhere and hoped they would be able some time to return entertain a similar body of men from Europe.

The leaders of the party said they believed their work in the interest of the forthcoming international convention of Chambers of Commerce had met with great favor.

Tables were placed in enormous banquet halls at side and more than twice as long as Symphony Hall, a wonderful cloth [illegible] where covers were laid for 1,200 guests. All Vienna's best were on hand to meet us.

In this enormous place ordinary speeches [illegible] before, but it was the Joe Mackfitzgerald, who knew far better than the Viennese visitors themselves how to throw his voice and impose his personality upon a great throng.

His speech was the best he had made on the tour, and was entirely appropriate to the occasion. John Martin of New York was the second American speaker, and the second and fourth Burgomasters made addresses for the Austrians.

An amusing incident occurred after the banquet. Fitzgerald lost his hat when it was put sufficiently acquainted with the looks of the missing [illegible] which he had bought in Berlin to recognize it at a glance. So he got inside the coupe and started looking at the [illegible] of the [illegible] upon the pegs.

Ordered the Mayor Out.

The man in charge was talking with his mouth, hands and feet, but the Mayor didn't know he was protesting at his presence and was looking [illegible].

The hat man was reinforced by two [illegible] and when they took him by [illegible] and started to put him out he [illegible] in Vienna.

Several American gentlemen arrived in time to see the ejection and they were so sorry [illegible] with shame and indignation at the [illegible] of Ex Lord Mayor of Boston that [illegible] and [illegible] the hat. They could not kill the hat man. The yelling could be heard for miles. Meanwhile the Mayor was endeavoring to impress it upon the man that he could take the hat as a present, but must be [illegible] said was:

"Do you think it is going to rain?"

He found his hat after some of the guests had taken theirs and smilingly accepted profuse apologies for the incident.

At a [illegible] next morning the party left for Budapest and the reception committee turned up for the last time, each with a fresh bouquet for the ladies. There were goodby speeches and cheers and Beautiful Vienna was left behind.

More About Fitzgerald.

Mayor Fitzgerald honestly I don't like to have to talk of [illegible] one but he is always doing [illegible] cope—like [illegible] commence a tour that would [illegible] Hampden [illegible] whirlwinds [illegible] between August 1 and [illegible] He intended to visit Avignon [illegible] Paris [illegible] Boulogne, Dublin, Limerick, Cork and Queenstown, and he was going to take his daughters with [illegible].

He was not stopped by the Hungarian Humane Society, their [illegible] any judging by the way the cab drivers beat their horses, but he drew the line [illegible] land and vote [illegible] new [illegible] time [illegible] [illegible] of a flash. So he [illegible] and [illegible] Dover and [illegible] and [illegible] the Paris Herald [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

When Europe's "Funny" Men Tried to Make Me Laugh

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

By Lew Fields,

THERE isn't a really funny comedian on the whole European Continent I looked until my ears got blue for a real dyed-in-the-wool, blown-in-the-bottle, laugh-maker. As I walked up the gangplank of the steamer bound for home, I said to myself: "There isn't a funny bone in all Europe—on the stage or off."

It's all because of the laugh-proof audiences and the clownlike methods of the funny men who try to gouge the titters out of them over there. Believe me when I say that the biggest laughs those fellows get come from Americans in the audience—not so much because what the comedian said was funny, but because of the ludicrous, jumbled way he hands out a warmed-over American joke. Their best puns are American bred.

Take, for instance, an American monologue artist telling a joke. We will select James J. Morton as an excellent example. He stands still all the while he's talking and he gets laughs galore. There is no physical contortion necessary to help him get a laugh. But the poor Frenchman has to tie himself in a knot, while the Englishman has to stand on his head, light up his nose, or explode a cap in his red wig to get a smile. The poor German comedian, after telling his pun while leaning over a table, will pull the table and dishes over on top of him, get his feet caught in the legs, and in this way get the laugh.

An English monologist, visiting this country, may have heard Morton tell this dear old friend joke:

"I went fishing yesterday and caught two mackerel, but when I got back I had three fish—two mackerel and one smelt."

Probably the Englishman didn't know what the audience was laughing at, but it so palpably made good that he took it

"The American comedian stands still, the Frenchman ties himself in a knot, the Englishman stands on his head and the German starts a 'rough house.'"

Adventures of Harold Hangover

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

HAROLD HANGOVER, the famous Oshkosh pitcher and the inventor of the "sneeze ball" comes to New York, and after a successful but stormy connection with the Giants he quarrels bitterly with Manager McGraw and joins the Yankees, at the princely salary of $50,000 per annum, A. D.

CHAPTER XI.

"THEY tell me this Cobb is some slugger," said Harold Hangover to Harold Chase, as he was warming up lazily in front of the stand.

"I should say he is," replied Harold Chase.

"They tell me that he comes up to the plate swing ing three bats," continued Harold. "Well, I am going to make him throw away the third one every time he steps to the plate. Watch me."

He is a fiery player," said Chase. "If you show him too much he is likely to hit you a bat in the kisser."

It hardly seems possible," said our hero, languidly. So many brave men have tried that. And so few, so very few, have succeeded. There was a fiery Georgia person in our old Wisconsin League, playing for Ap ...ton. He took a swing at me once with a bat. Man ...ged to evade the cruel swing I hoped five knuckles of his bower. He didn't come for a week.

Harold Chase gazed admiringly at Harold Hangover. "You have certainly got the right stuff in you," he said. "I know that you can go in and win to-day."

Harold Hangover smiled—a mysterious smile—the smile of a man with an ace in the hole and two more in sight.

Watch me, girl" was all he said.

CHAPTER XII.

The game was on.

The Detroit boys were trying like fiends to win.

"Eyah! Eyah!" shrieked the manager of the Detroit boys. "Let's get after this big bush leaguer. He can't button his collar now. E-yah!"

Harold Hangover regarded Rush Jennings pityingly.

"More of the old style Baltimore stuff, eh?" he said.

"Why, Hughey, that Cornell cheer-master stuff wouldn't win a game in the day-coach circuit any more, let alone in the big league. Don't get so red in the face."

"E-yah! E-yah!" again howled the great Detroit manager, plucking up countless blades of grass and throwing them to the four winds. "Come on, boys! He's weakening."

"You must have been great at weeding the garden when you were a kid," said our hero. "You can do more damage to a grass plot than a lawnmower. How are Cobb and Crawford hitting to-day?"

"Crawford will get to you before long, don't worry."

"That remains to be saw," said Harold Hangover, who sometimes slipped back into the grammar of his forefathers.

For seven innings the Yankees and the Tigers had battled desperately, neither side getting anything that even remotely resembled a score. Mullin, the stocky Tiger twirler, was at his best, and when at his best as near to perfection as most pitchers ever hope to be.

But Harold Hangover—oo, la, la! Such pitching has seldom been seen on this planet as the great Oshkosh twirler was showing to the dazed players representing the beautiful Michigan city. To say that he had everything was putting it mildly indeed. He had so much that he offered to loan some of it to Mullin.

"Who's your new man, Chase?" shouted the Detroit rooters.

"His name is Beezle McGuirk," Chase explained to the hostile rooters. "Last year he hit $1.86 in the Wisconsin League. He got chased out of the Wisconsin League for spiking a fresh rooter in the face."

"Who is he? Who is he?" they shouted to the umpire.

The umpire ignored the clamor.

Seeing that the umpire had not acquainted the crowd with his identity, Harold Hangover walked over to the stand, raised his cap with the courtly grace of a knight and said in a loud, bell-like voice:

"Ladies and gentlemen: My name is Harold Hangover. I am the inventor of the sneeze ball, the slum ball, the beer ball, the crab glide and the Murphy ball. To-day I propose to show you something absolutely new. In the ninth inning I am going to strike out two men, pass the next three and then strike out Sam Crawford with the bases full. I am going to use, in accomplishing this feat, a ball never before seen in action. I thank you."

"Get back in there and pitch!" exclaimed Manager Chase. "What do you think you are—a barker?"

The great Oshkosh pitcher paid no attention to the cruel taunt. Retiring the side with his sneeze ball, after using so much snuff that even Jennings and the groundkeeper were sneezing violently, he stepped to the plate in the Yankees' half of the ninth inning and banged out a clean home run.

"Don't exert yourselves, boys," he said, smilingly, as he walked back to the visiting players' bench after his notable feat. "This one run is going to be enough. Take things easy."

In the ninth inning Harold Hangover did just what he had predicted he would do. Retiring two men on strikes, he purposely walked the next three batters, and there, striding up to the plate with his huge bat and his stern face, came Sam Crawford, "Wahoo" Sam, the batter, the most feared man in the American League.

"How are you, Sam?" said Harold Hangover.

"Stick one over, busher!" sneered the ex-tonsorialist.

So enraged was Crawford that he missed two sneeze balls before he remembered to put a clothespin on his nose.

"Now, Mr. Crawford," said Harold Hangover, "I am going to feed you something brand new."

Slowly a ball floated up to the plate, a peculiar ball, striped red and white like a barber-pole.

Crawford stood there at the plate like one hypnotized, watching the approaching sphere with its stripes of red and white—the colors that reminded him of earlier and happier days. Before he knew it the ball had floated directly across the plate, waist high.

"That was my barber ball," smiled Harold Hangover. "Next!"

(Another thrilling installment next Sunday.)

Wooed and Won Under False Colors

By WEX JONES

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

From James Smith, Seabeach, to John Brown, New York.

Dear Jack—This isn't much of a place for a vacation. There is nothing to do but swim, and that becomes monotonous after a while. What beats me is that some people live here the year around. It must be fine here in Winter, when there is nothing to do but sit around and wonder what sort of a season it will be the next Summer. I more or less envy you and the other fellows who have a nice office to go to, and jobs to keep you occupied all day. Never again will I hit up a strange place for my vacation. It is the most lonesome thing in the world, and I wish I was back at work once more, but I suppose I'll have to stick out the two weeks and come back and say I had a great time. I never did know any one who returned from a vacation and admitted that there had been one moment of it that wasn't full of joy.

JIM.

P. S.—Tell everybody in the office that I am having a corking time.

From Susie Schofield, Seabeach, to Ella Evans, New York.

Dear Ella—Seabeach is just "the limit." It is the deadest place you ever saw, and I'm tired to death of it already. There isn't a thing to do but swim, and that gets awfully tiresome when you have nobody to teach you. I never get tired of learning how to swim, do you? The past three Summers I have learned several times each season, but this year all I can do is just go in and swim. I almost wish I was back in the store with you and the other girls handing out pink ribbons to parties that want baby blue.

SUSIE.

P. S.—Be sure and tell all the girls that I am having a perfectly lovely time down here, and that it is the best place ever.

From James Smith, Seabeach, to John Brown, New York.

Dear Jack—I pity you poor ginks working away in the city while I am down here having a fine time in the good old ocean air. Seabeach is considered kind of slow by some people, but it's plenty good enough for me. There is nothing like a rest from the toil of adding up figures and putting in the whole evening looking for an error that's been staring you in the eye all the time. Seabeach may seem a little dull at first, but it's a corking fine place when you get to know it a little. I am having a fine time and expect to return to work greatly refreshed and benefited. (H'm!)

JIM.

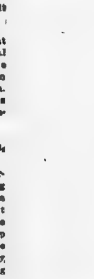
P. S.—Met an awful nice girl called Shofield or Chofield, or something like that. I guess she is an heiress. She dresses swell.

From Susie Schofield, Seabeach, to Ella Evans, New York.

Dear Ella—I pity you girls working away in the store in this grand weather. Seabeach is one swell place all right. I am getting tanned fine; my arms are as brown as mahogany—or do you spell that with an "e" at the end? (You can look it up in the furniture ads.) This place seemed kind of dull at first, but it isn't so slow after all.

SUSIE.

P. S.—Met a fellow named Smith, who is stopping at the same boarding house. Smith isn't a very unusual name, but this Smith is sure one swell fellow. I think he must be a broker, or something like that. He often refers to his office, so he must be quite a business man. He dresses swell and has socks with five or six colors in them. He dances fine. Him and me are going swimming to-morrow.



From James Smith, Seabeach, to John Brown, New York.

Dear Jack—Went swimming with the heiress yesterday. She is a peacherino, all right, and we got along fine. She isn't a bit stuck up, no matter how swell a place she lives in in New York. She was talking about "taking her car" yesterday. Pretty fine for her; the best I can get is a subway car and hang on to a strap at that half the time. I wonder what sort of a car she takes—a limousine or a lemonade or what is it they call these things? I didn't say anything about keeping books to her, but I will to-morrow, as I don't want her to think I am passing under false pretenses. Why is it that life savers always want to pull a guy out of the water and save his life when he is having a happy time sporting with the billows? I can't understand it, unless they have to do something to justify their existence. It is annoying, however, to the person who has to be forcibly saved from having a pleasant swim. Wish you were here and having as good a time as I am.

Dear Ella—The fellow I wrote to you about before is the swellest ever. He must have a large library. He spoke about books yesterday. However, he isn't a bit stuck up over it, and him and me get along fine. He said he loved me—at least, he kind of said so—last night. It was moonlight—oh, well, you know how it is.

From the same to the same.

Dear Ella—Can you guess? You ought to see the ring! The only thing I'm worried about is what his swell folks will say about it. I'm in too much of a hurry to write.

Dear Jack—Well, I've gone and did it. We're to be married to-morrow. The only thing worries me is what her swell folks may say. Well, I don't care—we love each other.

WHEN EUROPE'S "FUNNY" MEN TRIED TO MAKE ME LAUGH

home and I heard this at a London music hall as a result:

"I went fishing yesterday and caught two bloomin' Yarmouth bloaters, and when I returned home I had three fish—the two bloaters, don't you know, and the other one was horribly odorous."

Then he turned a flip-flap, a cartridge exploded on his head, and the audience howled. There was absolutely no point, and the story might as well have been omitted altogether. Probably, however, the audience thought he was "spoofing" them, and the explosion and flip-flap did the rest.

That the smelt joke, imported from America without the point, was fast gaining European popularity, was further evidenced in Paris, where a French comedian told it somewhat as follows:

"Yesterday I go feeshing in zee grrrand Seine. I catch zee two beautiful what you call sole. I come back—sacre, bleu! How zey smell!"

Then he promptly tied himself in a lover's knot for the laugh.

The German comedian took his place at the table, stein in hand. Then he proceeded to "put it over" like this:

"Yesterday I vendt oudt py der fishtink allretty. I ketchum twvice—der flounters. I come back allretty yet. Ach, Himmel! Schmutsig! Dey schmell!"

Then over on his back he flops, spilling dishes and beer all over the place. That was his scream-getter and he looked the most satisfied man in the world when he untangled himself from the wreck.

Just to give you an idea of an English joke, here is one that I heard in a London music hall:

"My girl was so hungry that when I gave her three chocolate drops she ratlled like a dice box."

Of course when the people heard this they didn't laugh. The comedian had to go through a physical bit of business to explain what he meant. He commenced to rattle himself, and immediately they roared. They didn't get the point until he became a human dice box.

Another characteristic English joke, runs like this:

Said the man at the crossing to a deaf man:

"Look out there, a car's coming."

"What's that?" asked the deaf man.

"There's a train coming. Look out!"

"The English comedian would never think of telling a joke about his shoes without pointing to them."

"What?" asked the deaf man.

And with that the train struck him and hauled him several feet away. As the deaf man picked himself up he said.

"I wonder what that fool kept me there talking about."

At every music hall where I heard this told, there wasn't a sign of a laugh until the comedian began to go through the antics of a man being struck by a train.

In Europe, you see, every joke, no matter how obvious, has to be carefully illustrated. The English comedian, for example, would never think of telling a joke about his shoes without pointing to them.

Although I was a constant visitor to the leading theatres, the only good stories I heard while abroad were told me by Americans, traveling like myself. Here's one Willie Collier sprung at luncheon one day in Paris:

"It was the first night of a new play in Brussels, and the play was a disastrous failure. With the exception of one lone person, everybody in the audience was hooting, hissing, cat-calling, or expressing disapproval in some way. The solitary exception was accosted by the man next to him

"Why don't you hiss this terrible piece?" he was asked

"The man modestly replied that he had come in on a pass, therefore could not complain.

"'But,' he added, 'if the play keeps up two minutes more, I'll go out and buy a ticket and join you.'"

The English comedian's slang is the most amusing thing he does—and that isn't saying much.

If he wants to say you are "dippy" or "loco," he'll say: "That fellow is bof 'is crumpet.." Or, "that fellow is a bit balmy." A crumpet is a muffin. A headache is "a pain in my bump o'lead." A man jagged is said to be "ginny" or "E's a bit squiffy."

"Spoofing" means kidding. A "toff" is a dude. "I feel top hole" means that he feels great. It's a golf expression. If he wants to tell you that he "has your goat," he says: "H'I 'ave 'is rag out." To "beat it" or to "skidoo," is "'op it," "pop off," or "sling your hook." When he feels sick he says: "H'I'm feeling terrible Uncle Dick to-day."

Neither England nor France, nor Germany, can touch America for real fun—fun that gets the laughs without being in any way objectionable. Really, I got more enjoyment out of the few minutes I spent with Willie Collier and Marshall Wilder than I did at all the theatres I visited.

After seeing a new production in Berlin a woman newspaper correspondent came to get my opinion of it.

"Well, Mr. Fields," she said, "what would you like to play in Berlin?"

"Pinochle," said I, "and that's all."

She saw the point, because she happened to be an American woman. Otherwise she'd probably be puzzling over it yet.

"I CAN'T help it; I'm really frightened, dear. And you know well enough I'm no flighty sarmist. Besides, somehow, I feel certain that Sam's brother would tell John to go to Arizona.' Rita pointed piteously to her trunk. "It's packed; it has been packed for weeks. I'm all ready to go with him. Why can't a man mold clay and chip marble and cast bronze as well in Arizona as in this vile pest hole?"

Valerie sat with chin on hands looking at her. "How do you think you could stand that desolation?"

"Arizona?"

"Yes."

"There is another desolation I dread more."

"Do you really love him so?"

Rita slowly turned from the window and looked at her. "Yes," she said.

DIX—Hello, Bix. How the dickens did you get bunged up so?

BIX—Driving a bargain

DIX—What was it?

BIX—A '98 model.

DIX—What did it cost you?

BIX—Two yards of skin and some teeth

DIX—I mean what did you give for it?

BIX—I won it.

DIX—Won it? Gee, you're lucky

BIX—Yes. I could have been killed

DIX—Did you win it at a raffle?

BIX—Yes. A dollar a chance At the drawing it was awarded to me for bravery.

DIX—For bravery? How so?

BIX—I was the only one who took a chance.

DIX—I never knew you to have an accident before.

BIX—I met with another one this morning. I ordered three mild eggs——

DIX—Wild eggs?

BIX—No, mild eggs. They're running strong lately, and I wasn't taking any more chances.

DIX—Well, how about the accident?

BIX—The eggs were mild.

DIX—It never happened to me I wonder what will happen next.

BIX—Maybe you'll offer to buy a drink

DIX—I wish I could, old man.

BIX—What's the trouble? Against your principles?

DIX—No indeed. The fact is my credit's gone at all the places I am known. And that means at all the known places.

BIX—You'd better go to work.

DIX—I start to-morrow to be a life saver.

BIX—Giving up your car?

DIX—No. Down at the beach. I don't expect to be very busy, though.

BIX—Why?

DIX—Most of the bathers know the ropes. Perhaps I'll rescue an heiress and marry her.

BIX—You'd have to get her promise before you brought her in.

DIX—Oh, I don't know I could save her for a worse fate. There's you.

BIX—I don't think it very likely, though They don't go in for that sort of thing

DIX—Oh, yes they do. I've seen many an heiress at the beach attired for a dip

BIX—That may be, but I said "go in"

DIX—Anyway, heiresses marry titles—human contradictions.

BIX—Why contradictions?

DIX—They come across, but they don't "come across."

BIX—The love game in most international matches flickers out early.

DIX—And Uncle Sam gets the burnt end

BIX—So you're going to man a boat (if I may say "man" in your case), and be a life saver, and you a college graduate.

DIX—Yes, and that's one of the things that I did not learn there.

BIX—Why don't you make use of your education?

DIX—I can't remember that I ever learned anything

BIX—The self-made man beats out the college chap every time.

DIX—All men are self made, only some men turn out a bad job.

BIX—And a good many are unskilled laborers

DIX—You're talking. What has your college education done for you?

BIX—It has, nearly

DIX—Nearly what?

BIX—Done for me. Still, I'm glad I went I could write a book on "the fun I had at college."

DIX—And I could write one on "the trouble I have had to live after college"

BIX—Education helps a man make his mark

DIX—And it comes to an illiterate man naturally

BIX—What does?

DIX—Making his mark (X)

BIX—Yes. Look at Murphy

DIX—I don't want to. He's a sight

BIX—I wish I had a look in on his money

DIX—Well, he has a daughter and she's single

BIX—Thanks, but she's already attached

DIX—Is that so?

BIX—Yes, to a wooden leg

DIX—She should be a suffragette

BIX—Why?

DIX—She'd make a good stump speaker

BIX—Not with her understanding

DIX—I saw you yesterday with a peach

BIX—Yes. A clingstone I was two hours saying good by.

DIX—She's rather a stunning looker

BIX—You bet she's a looker Looking for a husband.

DIX—I suppose she looks upon you as a likely mate

BIX—Probably. But I'll skip her

DIX—Say, King is married

BIX—How do you know?

DIX—He has had his last years straw hat cleaned

BIX—His wife is one of those women who can't be denied.

DIX—She has the most to say, then

BIX—No, he has, but he never gets the chance

DIX—Then he's in for it

BIX—Yes—for life.

DIX—And no matter how short it is it will seem long

BIX—He gets extra employment out of it.

BIX—That's just what [illegible] I have.

DIX—Have you a cat?

BIX—I had one before that I was married

DIX—Has your wife [illegible] saw bathing?

BIX—No. I only wish I could

DIX—Is oil good for the hair?

BIX—It didn't help John [illegible]

DIX—I wouldn't want it—how'd it be?

BIX—Why?

DIX—I'm too old a man to be [illegible]

BIX—I saved $200 last [illegible]

DIX—How did you do it?

BIX—My wife was sick and couldn't buy a new hat.

DIX—I have found out that it doesn't pay to speak thoughtlessly

BIX—What was responsible for that great discovery?

DIX—The other night, on retiring, I remarked to my wife that she took longer to prepare for bed than any one I knew.

BIX—That was thoughtless, but it doesn't prove anything

DIX—It proves that a man should say as little as possible to his own wife.

A COMMUTER'S PROGRESS THROUGH MOVING PICTURE LAND

BY STANLEY WOOD, the Celebrated English Artist.

"Three of the horridest painted savages."

WHEN we decided to stop here in America for awhile I agreed with my wife that a bunga low somewhere, not too far from New York, was the right idea. Nothing like a bungalow, you know, for the Summer; both comfortab e and "some class," as my music hall friends say.

Somebody told us Staten Island, for bungalow purposes, made Westchester County, Long Island and New Jersey look foolish. So one day we took a municipal ferryboat for St. George and landed in the arms of the most persuasive real estate agent I had ever met. Bungalow, bless us! he had exactly what we wanted. It wasn't a bad sort of place, a short trolley ride off over among the hills—near enough to walk from the ferry on pleasant evenings, was the mental note I made.

"Cleopatra poked her sceptre at my stomach."

A few days later we were domiciled. I left my wife putting things to rights and went back to New York on pressing business with an editor, promising to be home for dinner. I was also promising myself a delightful walk through these dingly dells and along those wooded hillsides.

It was about half an hour before sundown that evening when the ferryboat again landed me on Staten Island. I climbed the hill overlooking the harbor and started for my proud bungalow at a brisk walk. Suddenly, if you'll believe me, I found myself face to face with three of the horridest painted savages that ever lived outside of the pages of a "Wild West" novel. Real ones, too, from beaded moccasins to the feathers in their long black hair.

"Waugh!" said the biggest Indian—and I have seen me jump. I could feel my scalp creep. I never have run so fast since I was in knickers.

With cold perspiration running down my nose I hurried on, fearful of the fate of my poor wife. Had she been scalped, or carried off for ransom by the rest of the tribe? Oh, horrors!

While I was trying to decide how much my wife was worth, around a bend in the road came Cleopatra. I instantly knew her for the great Egyptian Queen who played such ducks and drakes with Julius Caesar, Mark Antony—not to mention others—because she had Egyptian male attendants with her. You see, they wore real Turkish headgear. I didn't remember her till later that one smoked a pipe and the other a cigar.

I rubbed my eyes and stood in the royal path with my mouth open until Cleopatra poked her sceptre at my stomach, while one of the attendants, in a deep bass voice, requested me to "chase myself." Being still scared at the painted savages, I took his advice and sprinted over the top of a grassy hill.

Presently I grew a bit calmer, reasoning that Cleopatra and her attendants probably were guests en route to an impromptu mask ball at some nearby house. Ah! why not those painted savages as well? What a fool I was making of myself, to be sure!

My serenity would have been quite restored now if, on topping the hill to descend on the other side, I had not been nearly run down by the familiar white steed of Napoleon the Great. Shades of the Pantheon! On the steed, arms folded, glaring at me out of his piercing eyes, was Napoleon, the immortal victor at Marengo!

"Vive l'Empereur!" I was about to shout as a precautionary measure, but the steed was so nearly upon me that I had to side-step instead, and allow the greatest of historic figures to proceed up the hill.

I felt my panic returning—also I felt my pulse. Was I going crazy? Worse, was I "seeing 'em" as they say over in this country of forcible epigrams. But I had not been exposed to snakes and pink elephants—I am a strictly sober man.

"On the steed was Napoleon."

It was well that I did not cogitate unduly, for a minute later, over another hill, came upon me three mounted cowboys, sombreros, "chaps," revolvers, lariats and all—the most riotous bunch that ever "shot up" a town. They were galloping in the direction of Stapleton.

By this time I was "plum locoed," beyond any further speculation as to whether I was awake or dreaming.

I was now entering a little glen between two tree-covered ridges, and decided to take a short cut to the bungalow, where my poor wife awaited me, dead or alive—when I saw within three yards of me a line of gray-uniformed soldiers lying on their stomachs with carbines clutched ready to fire.

There was barely time for me to get behind a tree when down the further hillside galloped an officer in blue, waving his sword and yelling orders at a dozen soldiers accompanying him at the "double quick." Instantly the gray soldiers were on their feet. Banging their carbines, the blues and the grays rushed together with carnage that was awful. A straggler passed near me.

"Where am I? What does it mean?" I asked.

"Battle of Gettysburg," said he. "Ain't it great?"

Painted savages! Cleopatra and her ancient Egyptian attendants! Fire-eating cowboys! Napoleon on his charger! The bloodiest of all battles! And this was the peaceful, sylvan island to which I had brought the unsuspecting wife of my bosom to bungalow for the Summer!

Madly I rushed on, gained our vine-wreathed portal, entered, found my wife apparently whole, seized her with one hand and a suit case with the other and dragged both off at my best speed toward the municipal ferry for New York.

"Why Stanley!" she gasped, "what on earth's the matter?"

I told her as we ran. She agreed with me—her indignation may be imagined.

"The Blues and Grays rushed together wtih carnage that was awful."

Breathless, we found and confronted that wretched real estate agent. I handed him his miserable key—after recounting all the horrors of my evening walk home—"home"!

"How foolish of you," said the agent. "Here you get a bungalow right in the heart of Moving Picture land, without extra charge, and you want to cancel the lease!"

Moving pictures! Films for the moving picture show—Napoleon, Cleopatra, the Indians, cowboys and the Battle of Gettysburg. A great Staten Island industry—but I firmly declined to make any further Roman holiday of myself and wife, and so our vine-wreathed bungalow is again for rent.

"Her indignation may be imagined."

"The most riotous bunch that ever 'shot up' a town."

"Goody Two-Shoes" a Cash-Girl? NEVER! She Dances "Salome"

A Twentieth Century Fairy Tale with a Sugar-Coated Moral for Stern Parents, Ambitious Daughters and Others.

By Hy. Larious Grin.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Publishing. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

ONCE upon a time there was a little girl whose parents were very poor and they could not find sufficient money with which to pay the rent and the instalment man, much less to buy shoes for her.

She was a very good little girl, despite her sad lot, and in the Winter she used to stay indoors as much as possible, but whenever she had to go out of doors she would slip on a pair of her mother's oldest shoes.

Her mother's shoes were always "oldest," and whenever this little girl was seen out of doors wearing her mother's great big shoes there were many of their tenement neighbors who knew well enough that mother was toddling about the three-by-four domicile in her stocking feet.

Because this little girl was so very good and because she looked so comical trotting out to the grocery store to try and get trusted for a quarter of a pound of tea, wearing the big, shabby shoes, all her playmates used to call her "Goody Two-Shoes."

But Sarah didn't mind it at all. Sarah was the name of this good little girl; so you will see, dear reader, that she was indeed unfortunate.

In the long, cold months little Goody Two-Shoes used to suffer because her feet became chilled, and so she got in the habit of dancing about the house to keep her feet warm. In the Fall and Spring, when there was no snow on the ground, Goody Two-Shoes would go out and play for a while, but she always danced about.

One day as Goody Two-Shoes was dancing down the street to keep her feet warm she saw a bill poster putting up some wonderful pictures of a woman with bracelets on her arms and bells on her ankles and a belt of rubies about her waist. With the exception of a few yards of mosquito netting the lady in the picture was waving about her head, that was all she wore.

Quite a crowd gathered about the bill poster to watch him paste up this alluring lithograph, but the bill poster didn't care for that—he was only anxious lest an agent of the Purity Society might happen along before he had finished his job.

"Betcher she makes heaps of money," said Mamie Maguire to her friend, Lizzie Donlon, as they gazed at the picture and chewed gum in unison.

"Betcher," heartily responded Lizzie.

"I seen a piece about her in a paper over to th' store," continued Mamie, "an' it said she learnt to dance when she was a kid and hadder go barefooted. The piece I seen in th' paper said she danced to keep her feet warm."

"Oh, my!" exclaimed Goody Two-Shoes to herself; "so she had to go without any shoes when she was a little girl and had to dance to keep her feet warm."

Then Goody Two-Shoes studied the picture carefully. She had never seen anything like that, because there was no bath room in her house.

"Why!" exclaimed Goody Two-Shoes, still talking to herself, "I guess from the way she's dressed she had to dance because she was cold all over!"

But Goody Two-Shoes remembered that picture, and that night she asked her mother if women made money by dancing.

"Make money?" ejaculated her mother, "I should say they do. Why I've heard tell they make as much as 'leven or nine dollars a week."

"'Leven or nine dollars a week!" snorted Goody Two-Shoes' father, who read the papers whenever he wasn't seeing double, "why them Solomnly dancers make much as a hundred an' fifty cold plunks every Satterday night."

"There, what'd I tell you," echoed Goody Two-Shoes' mother, always proud of the wisdom of her husband, who could hold more statistics and things than any other man in the block.

"I'm goin' to be a dancer"—— Goody Two-Shoes started to say when her mother interrupted her.

"You're goin' to get a job as a cash girl next Fall, that's what you're goin' to do, and bring home your two dollars every Satterday night."

"Yes," added Goody Two-Shoes' father, "you're goin' to be a cash girl and then be a real clerk in a big store, and make as much as four dollars a week. So keep your clothes on and forgit dancin'."

Goody Two-Shoes was a good little girl and she said: "Oh, gee, Paw, all right," but she continued to think of the picture of the dancing woman all rigged out in bracelets and such things and she couldn't understand why her father and mother wouldn't let her be a dancer, because she knew a hundred dollars was ever so much more than four dollars a week.

Finally she decided her father and mother simply said that so as not to hurt her feelings, because they believed she couldn't dance. When Autumn came, her mother told her she was going to get her some shoes and a print dress the following Saturday and that her father had got her a nice job as a cash girl in a big store run by a gentleman by the name of "Emporium." She said she saw his name over the door of the store.

Goody Two-Shoes was heart broken, because she had much rather dance for a living than run around in a big hot store having the women clerks call her "Ca-a-a-sh" through their powdered noses all day.

That afternoon she was out of doors playing when a hurdy-gurdy man came along and she began to dance as he ground out the music. While she was dancing a wonderful fairy touched her on the shoulder and said:

"Little girl, do you like to dance?"

"Oh yes [illegible] and plush [illegible] was wearing.

"Well you [illegible] continued the [illegible] was thought was a fairy.

Yes, indeed [illegible] dress the lady [illegible] that night. First, Goody T[illegible] parents, but later she [illegible] surprise them by telling [illegible] ing after supper and went [illegible] stage door of a big theatre.

That night they dressed her [illegible] and she danced when they told her [illegible] deed, she was so happy she [illegible] father and mother would refuse [illegible] the lady gave her a whole [illegible] a dollar every night, she ran [illegible] matinees and decided that [illegible] he said.

"All right, Kid, you may dance until the show stops, then you go into the store as a cash girl."

Goody Two-Shoes was so happy all the season, dancing, that when the show stopped she couldn't bear to think of going back home and working in a store, so she ran away with a small company, and her father and mother did not hear of her for a long time.

She called herself "Goody Two-Shoes" because when she told the manager that was what they used to call her, he said it was a great name and she would make a hit.

Finally she wrote to her father and mother and sent them pictures of herself clipped from magazines, and told them it cost her nothing for her wardrobe, except, of course, the bracelets, and they hunted her up and were going to make trouble when she also told them she was getting $1,800 a week.

Her mother said, "For the land's sake!" while her father asked her what she meant by lying, but as she proved it, they forgot all about making a cash girl of her.

Goody Two-Shoes' father drank himself to death soon after on the money Goody Two-Shoes gave him, while her mother was supremely happy wearing green and pink and light blue colors all in one dress, and carrying her daughter's [illegible] about with her to guard them. She carried the wardrobe [illegible] in a little hand bag.

And to-day Goody Two-Shoes often [illegible] how her stupid parents tried to make her a 10c [illegible] week in Mr. "Emporium's" store.

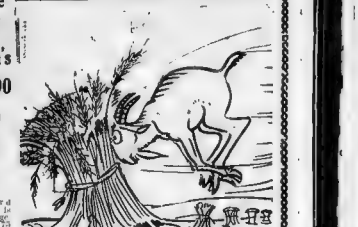
Enter the Boston American's $10,000.00 Proverb Contest Today!

Enter to-day! The sixty-third puzzle picture is printed on this page. There will be 100 puzzle pictures in all.

Enter the contest and give careful attention to all the puzzles. They are worth it.



What Proverb Does This Picture Represent?

The prizes are unparalleled in cost and attractiveness. Enter in time to feel confident of victory. Enter in time to enjoy at your leisure the pleasure of finding the correct answers to these interesting puzzles.

That means ENTER NOW!

The contest has progressed so far that the time table ends

Some of the puzzle pictures will be found to require quite a bit of thought, but the prizes are so great in value that if any one enters the contest determined to win, they will not want to "quit" the puzzles—they will want to do themselves justice—to put all their ingenuity into play. Study the official PROVERB BOOK carefully for the solutions of the harder puzzles.

That is why we say START NOW.

By doing so you will have sufficient time to get all the back numbers of the puzzle pictures solved WITH CARE, to keep up with the few remaining daily pictures, and to have your ten days of grace to review and revise your answers.

The Contest Department stands ready to furnish anyone with the back numbers of the puzzle pictures and answer blanks. You may have them at the regular rates of the AMERICAN for the days on which the pictures originally appeared in the paper. Otherwise, for 3c. back puzzle numbers are 5c. plus return postage; daily back numbers are 1c. plus return postage.

There is no reason why anyone within the reach of the AMERICAN'S great circulation should miss this opportunity to win a rich prize.

Look about you! Your neighbor is solving the puzzles. He may be one of the $12,000 prize winners. Step into a few of the Public Libraries, Read, a Piano or any one of the 1,000 prizes.

If you are entering the contest, order the official AMERICAN PROVERB BOOK at once. If you wish it sent by mail, send a money order for 25c., or 27c. in stamps, to cover cost of same to the Contest Department, 275 Devonshire street.

The book contains all of the correct answers to the puzzle pictures which will be used in the contest, and is the only official guide for contestants to follow.

There can be no better time than to-day.

Send for the back numbers and the PROVERB BOOK and get in the race!

CONTESTANT'S NOTICE

The official American PROVERB BOOK runs alphabetically, as far as the first letter of the proverb is concerned, i. e., All the A's, then the B's, then C's, together, etc., etc. There are no proverbs used in several letters of the alphabet but every contestant should be careful that the pages are numbered in order from 1 to 28, inclusive. If pages are incorrectly numbered, the official BOOK to Contest Department is not correctly numbered book will be sent.

Contestants should follow closely the spelling and punctuation of the official BOOK in all cases.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes will be awarded as follows: The person absolutely free by the Boston American, or to the nearest one living New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter the contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each puzzle, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in written in longhand, either on the typewriter or may be printed in plain letters, but each person must use the same method in the fancy of the contestant.

Participation in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each employe of the AMERICAN and members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each one must contain only one answer to each set and each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All members of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct answers. In case of a tie, a ward will be made on the basis of neatness and correctness of the list. In case a tie is decided in that way the tied contestants will receive duplicate prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed as PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information, they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on all questions which may arise will be absolutely final.

Who's Getting the Graft in Worcester?

Governor Foss's charge that the State's money is being stolen under the noses of officials backed up by astounding report of Prof. A. W. French, a noted civil engineer, who has investigated the $600,000 grade crossing job alongside the new Union Station.

CHARGES MONEY IS WASTED AND TRAVELLERS IMPERILLED UNDER NOSE OF $3,600 OFFICIAL

Eminent Engineering Authority Says Contractors Are Putting Three Times as Much Sand as Stone Into Concrete and Saving a Dollar Per Cubic Yard in Violation of the terms of the Contract

Henry W. Hayes, State Engineer of Grade Crossings, Working Under the Direction of the Attorney-General, is Sure That Work is "All Right," but Admits It's Hard to Discredit Professor French

THE $600,000 grade crossing job in Worcester is rich with graft. The city of Worcester, liable for 10 per cent. of the cost, is being robbed. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, assessed for 25 per cent., is being robbed. Weak mortar and weak concrete may place the lives of travelers in jeopardy. Such are the only inferences to be drawn from the report of Prof. A. W. French who has made a thorough investigation of the work.

With Governor Foss on the last leg of his journey to San Francisco, to be present at the marriage of his elder son, facts come to light indicating that the Governor spoke by the card when, in a Boston AMERICAN interview on August 6, he said.

"There isn't the slightest doubt in my mind that a lot of the State's money has not only been wasted but stolen. Stolen, not necessarily by the men who were appointed or employed to look out for the State's interests but under their noses."

The official "nose" in the Worcester case—or one of them—belongs to Henry W. Hayes of No. 8 Beacon street, Boston, with a residence in Arlington. Hayes is the "State engineer of grade crossings." His salary is $3,600 a year. He works under the direction of the Attorney-General.

Mr. Hayes is quite sure the work at Worcester is "all right." Eminent authorities suggest it is "all wrong."

The public has not forgotten that when Governor Foss declared his belief that the money of the State is being stolen a roar went up from every standpatter active in politics. Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham demanded that the Governor retract or make good." Representative Norman H. White "defied" the Governor to "back up his words."

PROF. FRENCH TELLS OF STATE ROBBERY.

Governor Foss was getting ready at the time to leave for California. He was a busy man. He said he had no time to answer Frothingham and White separately and individually. He suggested that they continue their battle for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, promising to satisfy the nominee that he knew what he was talking about.

But the facts couldn't wait, and here they are

Who says now that the State is being robbed?

Arthur W. French of Worcester!

And who is Arthur W. French?

Arthur W. French is a professor of civil engineering. For twelve years he has been at the head of the civil engineering department of Worcester Polytechnic Institute. For three years before going to Worcester he was associate professor of civil engineering in the Thayer School at Dartmouth.

On the "practical" side, Professor French's record shows that he was civil engineer at the Platte River Paper Mills, in Denver, Col., 1892-94, and subsequently was employed by the Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf Railway. Moreover, he was general superintendent for the contractors who built the Stadium at Harvard. He was superintendent for the Aberthaw Construction Company in the erection of the Mitchell (concrete) villa on the Island of Jamaica. He was inspector on the new building of the Worcester Antiquarian Society. He had charge of the work on the new electrical laboratory of "W. P. I."

With H. C. Ives, his assistant professor at Worcester, Professor French wrote "Stereotomy," a standard work on stone-cutting. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, a representative organization whose requirement sure exceedingly high. Members of the society must have at least ten years' actual service. They must also have ability to design, and to take charge of works.

FACTS AND FIGURES TELL STORY.

Mr. French, moreover, is a member of the National Association of Cement Users. He is forty-three years old, a native of Battle Creek, Mich., and a graduate of Dartmouth and the Thayer School of Civil Engineering.

So much by way of introducing Professor French to such readers of the AMERICAN as may not know of him and his work at Worcester. Now, what says Professor French of the $600,000 grade crossing job at Worcester, ten per cent. of which must be paid for by the City and twenty-five by the State?

This is Professor French's report as the result of an independent tour of observation:

Worcester Polytechnic Institute.
Department of Civil Engineering.

I have visited the construction now in progress on grade crossing elimination along the tracks of the Boston & Albany Railroad in the vicinity of Hammond and Southbridge streets, Worcester, and have closely observed the materials and methods used in placing the concrete in the retaining walls. I have also visited the sand and gravel pit in North Wilbraham Mass., from which sand and gravel are secured for the work.

A copy of the specifications for this work, which are on file at the State House, contains the following items:

"Concrete shall consist of a mixture of Portland cement, sand and broken stone or gravel, mixed in the proportions and manner hereinafter specified.

Classifications Are Specified

"Sand shall be clean, coarse, sharp and free from any foreign substance.

Sand having over five (5) per cent of clay or loam will not be allowed.

Broken stone shall be sound, hard and durable, and shall be clean and free from shale, dust, loam, clay or any foreign substance, and if necessary to meet these requirements, broken stone shall be screened and washed.

Screened shall be clean, hard and durable pebbles, free from loam or any foreign substance.

The following classifications are specified:

| | A | B | C | D |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Parts of cement | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Parts of sand | 2 | 2½ | 3 | 4 |
| Parts of stone or gravel | 4 | 6 | 7½ | 8 |

"Class B is used for the body of retaining walls and is specified as a mixture of one part of cement, three parts sand and six parts broken stone or gravel.

The concrete which is being placed in retaining walls is made from the screened sand and gravel, just as it happens to run in the bank from which it is taken by a steam shovel. The bank has a vein of gravel, about six feet thick, which may run about three parts sand to five parts stone. Under this vein is some eight feet of almost clear sand, only a very small proportion of it being pebbles. By the process of loading, a mixture of this material is obtained which has great excess of sand.

A cubic yard of the concrete specified, would contain about one-half a yard of sand, and the mortar which gives strength to the mass would be a one to three mixture.

The concrete actually going into the walls varies within wide limits, but will average to contain at least two-thirds of a yard of sand to one-third yard of stone, and in many cases as much as three-quarters of the yard is sand to one-quarter yard of stone.

The excess of sand results in a weak mortar and a weak concrete.

I find that the specifications are not enforced, that the work is being done with unscreened, run-of-bank material which does not approximate the mixture demanded, that the resulting concrete is inferior in quality, and that the strength of the work is materially reduced as a result.

I estimate that the substitution of the run-of-bank gravel for the properly proportioned sand and stone mixture is saving the contractors at least one dollar per cubic yard of concrete.

Yours truly, A. W. FRENCH.

SUBSTITUTE SAND FOR STONE AND SAVE $1 PER CUBIC YARD

The excess of sand results in a weak mortar and a weak concrete. I find that the specifications are not enforced, that the work is being done with unscreened, run-of-bank material which does not approximate the mixture demanded, that the resulting concrete is inferior in quality, and that the strength of the work is materially reduced as a result.

I estimate that the substitution of the run-of-bank gravel for the properly proportioned sand and stone mixture is saving the contractors at least $1 per cubic yard of concrete.—From A. W. French's report on Worcester crossing work.

Report Causes a Sensation.

As may naturally be supposed, the report of Professor French has produced a sensation in Worcester. His standing is so high, socially and professionally, that no man has dared to contradict him.

Hayes says—Hayes, the grade crossing engineer who ought to have known what was going on, and who is paid $3,600 for knowing what goes on—Hayes says it would be hard work to discredit Professor French. But Mr. Hayes will do any much more. He is likely before long to appear on the witness stand. It is regarded as certain that Governor Foss will start the unveiling whoop of Justice moving, immediately on his return from the coast.

The Worcester sensation, until to-day has been a Worcester sensation and only a Worcester sensation. It might be presumed that the Boston & Albany Railroad would put up a yell. Nothing has been heard from the railroad. It might be presumed that the Massachusetts Railroad Commission would "want to know." An anxious inquirer who sounded them out about it in the office of the Railroad Commission, at No. 20 Beacon street, was told that the Worcester contract was a private matter between the contractors and the railroad.

Does the State Pay?

The railroad is supposed to pay sixteen per cent. of the cost of grade crossing abolition. The city and the city fathers will have to pay ten per cent. The State & Aluminum Railroad, now a New Haven enterprise like every other railroad except the Grand Trunk, is a big one, and all that city and state have to do is to fork over the big per cent. and they'll have grade crossings without end.

The Boston & Albany railroad is owned by Massachusetts citizens, and Massachusetts citizens are rewarded.

Four days after his first report Professor French went back to Worcester. This time he came by motor car, making a [illegible] stop at Wilbraham to get a load of sand and gravel.

A visit to the grade crossing work today shows that a change has been made in the materials used in the concrete.

There is now [illegible] at each of the mixing plants. The broken stone is, however, not screened, and the resulting concrete is of the same poor quality as before.

At one mixing plant there was one man shovelling from the broken stone ear to right men shovelling from the car of bank sand and gravel. I should consider the addition of stone now being made as a mere bluff at meeting the specifications.

A. W. FRENCH.

Call for Investigation

After this second report, A. J. Comerford, member of the Worcester Board of Aldermen, decided that the time was ripe for an investigation. The young alderman [illegible] J. Comerford of Ward [illegible].

Comerford is a Democrat, the city has been for two years in the hands of the Democratic city [illegible] attorney and [illegible] ing in the [illegible] ambition is a graduate [illegible] in the courts and the law school [illegible] versity of Maine. He played on the varsity eleven and on the basketball team at college. He was also prominent [illegible] athletics.

Strange as it may seem, the Worcester Board of Aldermen was [illegible] to investigate the scandal. Being a man as the president of the board George I. Brooks, opposed to [illegible] against an inquiry by the aldermen.

This was Alderman Comerford's order:

Alderman Comerford's Order

Ordered: That a committee of five members of this board, with the president ex officio, be appointed by the chair to investigate all charges and rumors relative to the work of grade crossing abolition, with a view to determining whether or not the contractors are living up to the contract requirements in the construction of the work, and that said committee be authorized to employ such engineering assistance as may be necessary to enable it to make a thorough investigation of the work, and that said committee be authorized to employ counsel to assist it in the investigation, and that said committee be authorized to send for persons and papers, and that said committee be authorized to report at any time it may deem advisable.

Professor French's Report Which Led to Demand for Investigation

The concrete which is being placed [illegible] mixed sand and gravel, just as it happens to run in the bank from which it is taken by a steam shovel. The bank has a vein of gravel about six feet thick, which may be run about three parts sand to five parts stone. Under this vein is some eight feet of almost clear sand, only a very small proportion of it being pebbles. By the process of [illegible] a mixture of this material is obtained which has great excess of sand.

A cubic yard of the concrete specified, would contain about one-half a yard of sand, and the mortar which gives strength to the mass would be a one to three mixture. The concrete actually going into the walls varies within wide limits, but will average to contain at least two-thirds of a yard of sand to one-third yard of stone and in many cases as much as three-quarters of the yard is sand to one-quarter yard of stone.

The excess of sand results in a weak mortar and a weak concrete.

I find that the specifications are not enforced, that the work is being done with unscreened, run-of-bank material which does not approximate the mixture demanded, that the resulting concrete is inferior in quality, and that the strength of the work is materially reduced as a result.

I estimate that the substitution of the run-of-bank gravel for the properly proportioned sand and stone mixture is saving the contractors at least one dollar per cubic yard of concrete.

CODY FINDS OLD CRADLE.

Buffalo Bill's Long Search for Memento of Childhood Days.

DES MOINES, Aug. 19.—Colonel W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) has located, through a Des Moines man, the cradle in which he and his sisters and elder brother were rocked to sleep when they were babies.

Colonel Cody had long been looking for that cradle, and from time to time had heard vague rumors that it was somewhere in Iowa. The prize is in the possession of Walter D. Olney, a former resident of Scott county, where Colonel Cody lived before his parents took him to Kansas.

The cradle was among the articles of furniture left behind with neighbors when the Cody family started for Kansas over land journey to Kansas in a prairie schooner. Olney obtained the cradle from David Lower, of Scott county, upon the latter's death several years ago. Lower's father made the piece of furniture himself.

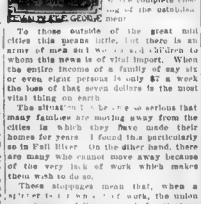
HUNDREDS of families in New England are living on $7 or less, even as low as $5.50 a week.

It sounds a bit extravagant expressed in that fashion, but nevertheless it is true.



REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE

I speak of the mill workers of Fall River, New Bedford, Lowell, Lawrence and the other textile cities of New England.

One-third of the employees now [illegible] weeks [illegible] able to get work [illegible] day after day we [illegible] in the papers [illegible] dispatches announcing [illegible] curtailment [illegible] mill or that [illegible] complete closing [illegible] of the establishment.

To those outside of the great mill cities this means little, but there is an army of men and women and children to whom this news is of vital import. When the entire income of a family of any six or seven eight persons is only $7 a week the loss of that seven dollars is the most vital thing on earth.

The situation [illegible] so serious that many families are moving away from the cities in which they have made their homes for years. I found this particularly so in Fall River. On the other hand, there are many who cannot move away because of the very lack of work which makes them wish to do so.

These stoppages mean that, when a spinner [illegible] work, the union [illegible] dollars a week for thirteen weeks. # THE FIRST INTERVIEW WITH MEXICAN IN EXILE

"I Want to Go Back to Mexico to Die," Former President Tells McIsaac at Lucerne, Switzerland. "I Loved My Country, and I Refused to Resign Until the Uprising Swept the Whole Country"

By F. J. McISAAC.

Copyright 1911, by the Boston Sunday American.

LUCERNE, Aug. 6.—An old man sat in the drawing room of the Lucerne Hof Hotel at Lucerne and looked out at the lake and the distant mountains. His head hung forward and his eyes were dull.

A woman, not young but apparently a generation younger than the man, was beside him, and read a newspaper to him in a low tone.

At the back of the room some American tourists were grouped and they were staring at the man and woman.

A new arrival bustled in and demanded, "Hello, what are you looking at?"

"Would you think that old man was Diaz, the ex-President of Mexico?"

"Really?"

"And that is his wife."

The Americans talked in low tones, for we may be an irreverent people but we can respect greatness, even when it is fallen.

DIAZ AND WIFE ALL ALONE IN HOTEL PARLOR.

The man who had been and emperor and dictator with the simple title of president, and the woman whose qualities and position made her one of the greatest ladies in the New World, were all alone in the hotel parlor.

Nobody in Lucerne bothered about deposed presidents. Too many royalty has spoiled the Swiss city, and fallen dictators from South American republics have left a bad impression. Only the American tourists knew that this man was different.

I sent in my card to Diaz with difficulty. It was like intruding at a funeral, better to raise the hat and turn away.

But Diaz did not resent the intrusion upon his grief. Perhaps anything was better than sitting in a public hotel looking out upon a Swiss lake and some needle-pine mountains.

Receive American Representative.

He took my card and smiled and then he rose to his feet in a surprising to see how tall he was. Madame rose with him and they received me with the same stately courtesy as when they received together in their Mexican palace and welcomed hundreds of the highest people and ambassadors of foreign nations.

It required little imagination to picture this man as he must have looked in his general's uniform ablaze with orders and decorations, for he was regal in his plain black neck suit. And Madame was dressed no better and no worse than any of the tourist ladies who crowd such hotels.

An American who had been presented to Diaz six years ago in Mexico City said he had aged terribly and was in fact much broken.

He must have been a very wonderful man in those days, for to me he seemed well preserved and strong considering his eighty-one years.

His face was sallow, but healthy in appearance; his drooping gray mustache and bushy eyebrows gave him the look of a French or Italian gentleman of about eighty years. I could see no trace of Indian blood except perhaps for his narrow eyes. But when he talked one thought of the Indian, for his voice was deep and his utterance thick.

Diaz speaks no English, but his wife, the cheerful little woman who is sharing his exile and making it bearable, speaks excellent French and can express herself fairly well in English.

Mme. Diaz Beautiful Woman.

Mme. Diaz acted as interpreter. She seems little more than forty, and is still a pretty woman. It is easy to see that she must have been a beauty.

"I would like to ask the president what he thinks will become of Mexico.

she put the question and it agitated him. He began to speak and she translated it phase by phase.

"I love Mexico. I am a patriot. I have risked my life for my country and at any time have been willing to die for her; she asked instead that I permit another to become president and I consented.

"Her future? God will protect Mexico. It is one of the richest countries in the world in natural resources. The people are good, loyal, intelligent. They will not be able to avoid their destiny of being great and free.

"At present there is disorder and uncertainty consequent upon revolution, but I hope and pray that these trials will end soon.

"Almost I am 3,000 miles away, and though I may never see my country again, I love her and I pray for her.

Would Like to Return.

"I would like to die in Mexico. I hope to go back to Mexico. It would be a sad thing if I, who gave so much of my life to making my country better, should be cast in foreign soil."

The ex-President was much moved. Madame laid a soothing hand upon his arm.

"It is good not to talk such things with him. He feels so deeply."

How does he like Europe?" I asked, to get off the serious subject.

Diaz made a gesture of impatience.

"It is very lovely, very beautiful, very interesting. But how can I be happy away when the country is not happy, when it is boiling with revolution? An exile cannot be happy in any land. And I am an exile. I am old to be an exile."

He smiled wanly. He must have seemed incredible that this courteous friend and old man could be the terrible Diaz, the iron man who for thirty years ruled a great country under a constitution that any democrat that he could ever have had the heart to order executions and to carry fire and sword in the peninsulas.

He sighed and said it over:

Why He Fled from Mexico.

"People think, the world believes, I fled from Mexico because I was no longer strong, because I could not suppress this rebellion as I have done others. But then I was strong.

"I know why I left Mexico. I was because I loved it. I am very old. In another year or two I would have laid down my burden and gone to my fathers. What use to wage civil war, to cause much bloodshed for a cause I could not long enjoy.

"At first when the revolt seemed insignificant I opposed it, for I could not have my country ever to a band of robbers. But when I found it was widespread, that people thought Diaz had been President too long, that a change was really needed, then I gladly bowed to the popular will.

"Diaz might again have conquered, but he wished no more bloodshed."

"We are departing this afternoon," said Madame Diaz for a motor trip through the mountains. He loves the mountains. They make him think of home. Talk of Mexico disturbs him, and we had better not talk any longer."

Later I saw the ex-dictator descending to his automobile. He walked very slowly and leaned heavily on the brave little woman who is his fellow exile. He is truly very old.

Poses for Photograph.

Before entering the car he consented to pose for a photograph. So he pressed his hat, squared his shoulders and assumed an air of greatness and command. But it was only for a moment. He climbed feebly into the car and sat humped up in a corner.

"Are you traveling alone through the mountains?" I asked Madame Diaz.

"For the present, but my son who is now in Paris, will join us in a few days. Please don't snap my photograph. A woman always looks horrid in a picture unless she has spent hours getting ready for it."

Madame smiled, the ex-President raised his hat and their car started up the mountain side.

TOURIST IMPRISONED IN ICE

Jammed Between Two Ridges of a Glacier for Nine Hours.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

GENEVA, Aug. 10.—A German tourist named Hildesquan had a thrilling experience at Rheinwaldhorn, where he was jammed between the two ridges of a glacier for nearly nine hours.

He had been one of a party of three who started to make the ascent of the Rheinwaldhorn, and although they were unaccompanied by a guide they managed to reach the summit in safety. But on the return journey Hildemann suddenly felt the ice give way beneath him and he slid several feet.

His comrades vainly endeavored to rescue him and they finally succeeded in digging him some twenty feet lower. Here the unfortunate tourist remained while his comrades made their way as best they could to the nearest hut. Hildemann almost froze to death.

GOT A 'STRAD' FOR A SONG

Woman Sells for $4,000 Violin She Obtained on Pawn Ticket.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The story sensational discovery of a Stradivarius violin comes from Burtonon-Trent. Some time ago, moved by compassion for his fellow musician, Mrs. Cotton of the Admiral Benbow inn gave him half a crown for a pawn ticket relating to a fiddle.

Later he told Mrs. Cotton the violin was one hundred years old and had belonged to his grandfather. Mrs Cotton redeemed the instrument.

Recently she showed the stringless instrument to a local musician, who declared it to be a "Strad," and the landlord would not believe that the violin was of value until a genuine dealer offered her $2500 for it. Last week she sold the instrument for $4,000.

KAISER A PLAGIARIST?

His Oldest Sister Pokes Fun at His Musical Works.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—The Kaiser's eldest sister, the Hereditary Princess of Saxe-Meiningen has accused him of plagiarism. Emperor Wilhelm prides himself upon his musical ability and has published several pieces of his own composition. His sister, the Princess, however has made a statement to her friends declaring that these compositions are not his own. Her accusations were promptly resented by the Kaiser and the quarrel between them is at white heat.

KITCHENER IN LOVE?

Recluse Lord Believed Engaged to Former Cleveland Girl.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—It is now declared that Lord Kitchener is the belief of society. His attentions to the fascinating Lady Naylor Leyland, formerly Jennie Chamberlain of Cleveland, Ohio, have brought about a rumor of his secret engagement. No confirmation of the rumor could be obtained today, however. Lord Kitchener is known as "the recluse." He has had a military intimate friend for five entirely alone save for a nephew in the navy. Who sometimes visits him. Should his engagement be announced it will be a great surprise to London society.

EX-PRESIDENT DIAZ SNAPPED AT LUCERNE

This photograph of the exiled Mexican President was taken outside the hotel at Lucerne, Switzerland, as Senor Diaz was leaving with Madame Diaz for an auto trip in the Alps. He posed for F. J. McIsaac, of the AMERICAN staff, who was sent to Europe with the Boston Chamber of Commerce party. The photograph was taken after the ex-President had granted Mr. McIsaac a personal interview.

Miss Bushnell Smith Retires from Paris Student Hostel to Grow Olives.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, August 19.—Miss Lydia Bushnell Smith, grandnate of Vassar in the seventies, moved by compassion for the Italian musician, Mrs. Cotton of the Admiral Benbow inn gave him half a crown for a pawn ticket relating to a fiddle. ## IRISH HONOR FOR LADY ARTHUR PAGET

Husband of Former Miss Paran Stevens Appointed to the Irish M'Itary Command.

By DENNISON CODMAN

Special Cable to Sunday American.

DUBLIN, Aug. 19.—Dublin is extremely interested in the appointment of General Sir Arthur Paget to succeed Sir Neville Lyttleton in the Irish military command.

This interest of course centers in Lady Paget, who was Miss Mary Dorcas Stevens of Boston, and who is extremely popular in Dublin. With her husband in Ireland With her husband in Ireland the Countess of Aberdeen wife of the Viceroy. All our friends are wondering how she will remain herself while the social people are extremely busy and [illegible]

Lady Paget has acquired considerable fame among those early days when she first entertained King Edward at her house in Belgrave Square, and put down straw in the street so that his majesty should not be annoyed by the traffic. It was meant as a mark of delicate attention but the King has never been enamored and would not speak to Lady Paget for a long time afterwards.

As a hostess she is a great success out as a whole. She is really popular, owing to a certain hilarity hardness in her [illegible] would invent the strangest ways to spend. Her friends say she will need all her tact to make herself popular in Dublin.

PIANO SALE

DON'T PAY TRUST PRICES

FOR ANY MAKE PIANO

I have been telling the people for years that it is not necessary to pay luxury prices to the Piano Trust for pianos. A piano is no longer a luxury. I have taken it out of that class. I have made it as easy to secure a piano (by reducing the price and making the terms of purchase liberal) as it is to secure any other household necessity.

I have educated the public on piano values to such an extent that the intelligent man or woman, who knows how to go about it, can now buy a piano for much less than it could be bought for three years ago. I am in receipt of letters daily from all over New England, praising me for the stand against the Piano Trust, and I am selling more pianos at lower prices than ever before. It pays to protect the public.

Don't buy any make piano till you see me.

Truthfully,

To Rebuild the Palace of Nebuchadnezzar

All through the interior of the palace ran splendid friezes depicting the glorious triumphs of Nebuchadnezzar, for he had routed the Egyptians, destroyed Jerusalem and carried the Jews into captivity and reduced the great city of Tyre to subjection.

The other remains of Babylon are [illegible] which has been dug up in that country and [illegible]

Most interesting is the Gate of Ishtar, or Venus Astarte, the chief goddess of the luxurious Babylonians, with its brilliant decorations of blue and yellow bulls and dragons. The explorers have now found the site of the celebrated Hanging Gardens, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world reputed to have been built by Queen Semiramis.

If only the palace of Nebuchadnezzar is restored, it will prove a great attraction to travellers. Babylon is agreeably situated on the Euphrates River, and tourists will flock to visit the mightiest city of Biblical times restored to prosperity and to a semblance of its pristine glory by modern science and enterprise.

Muyscas, who had no gold in their own country, were nevertheless enabled to obtain vast quantities of the precious metal, which they hoarded.

Truly it might be said that theirs was a golden age. The ceremonies of their religion, as described by the Spaniards, were all connected with gold. Familiar to them was the art of casting and hammering gold by masterful shapes, and they adopted their weapons and clothing in imitative of animals and other living forms. Not only do they seem to have understood how, by the even washed objects with gold, producing an effect similar to that obtained by the modern galvanic process. How they accomplished some of these things is difficult to understand, though there is no question of the fact that they knew how to use the blowpipe.

There were in that region several sacred lakes—holy places—each of which was understood to be the headquarters of a particular god or goddess. Gifts of value intended for these divinities were thrown into the waters on ceremonial occasions.

Most celebrated of all these lakes was Guatavita, some distance to the north of the present city of Bogota, and just about two miles above the sea. It was, and is to-day, a small sheet of water, nearly circular and about a mile in diameter, occupying the crater of an extinct volcano—a very symmetrical and beautiful cone-shaped mountain.

It appears that whenever the chieftain of the Muyscas, who was called the "zaque," died, his successor was appointed by formal election, which was followed by festivities and an elaborate ceremonial performance in the crater of the volcano aforesaid. All the men of the native population marched in long procession to the sacred lake, the column being led by men whose naked bodies were painted with red ochre (the hue of deep mourning), and who uttered loud wails and lamentations for the departed head of the tribe. They were followed by groups of men richly adorned with gold and emeralds, wearing beautiful plumes of feathers on their heads and with cloaks of jaguar skins thrown over their shoulders. Others blew horns and pipes. Then came the rank and file of priests, in tall black caps and tall black robes, and last in line marched the chiefs and chief priests, bearing the royal regalia, upon a raft or [illegible] with huge sticks [illegible]

The new chieftain presented an aspect gorgeous enough [illegible] worthy of the occasion. [illegible] body was anointed with [illegible] and covered [illegible] foot to foot with gold dust. He was, indeed, the Gilded Man—Hombre Dorado (in the [illegible] shore of the lake [illegible] upon a raft, and accompanied by four attendants, was put [illegible] to the middle of the sheet of [illegible] There, uttering mystic words, he threw into the water the [illegible] images and other gifts of [illegible] the goddess which he had brought with him for the purpose.

But the climax came when the Gilded Man, after distributing the presents he had come to bestow, plunged into the water and washed the gold from his body, while the assembled throng, silent during the gift scattering performance, broke into shouts of joy. The walls of the surrounding crater echoed their cries and the music of many instruments, and finally the new chief no longer golden, was brought back on the raft to the shore. The festival closed with dancing and much eating and drinking.

Now, for all that is known to the contrary, this remarkable ceremonial was held at intervals throughout a series of centuries. But, unfortunately, for the Muyscas, they were successfully attacked by another and stronger tribe in or about the year 1490 of the Christian era, and being conquered, were ordered to abandon the city in question.

The early Spanish settlers heard of the gilded man, but the first to set out in search of him was a certain Ambrosius Dalfinger, who at the time the German Governor of Venezuela. In July, 1529, he sailed across the Gulf of Venezuela (on the west coast of which he established a military post of Maracaibo), and thence marched inland in the direction of the setting sun.

Dalfinger got much gold from the natives, but he failed to find the country of the Gilded Man.

Pizarro and others eagerly pursued the same phantom, which so many was located in Peru. The search for the Gilded Man has much to do with the overrunning of Peru and other parts of South America by the Spaniards, who, wherever they went, tortured and murdered the natives on a wholesale scale in their quest for wealth.

Though surrounded by ferocious tribes of cannibals, it was, on account of its position, comparatively safe against invasion. It was a region famous for the production of emeralds, as it is to-day.

Far more valuable for commercial purposes, however, was the salt which the Muyscas dug from their own mines and sold, in the form of cakes, resembling white sugar loaves in appearance, to the neighboring tribes. The commodity was in such wide demand that even hostile peoples, dwelling as much as 100 leagues away, were regularly supplied with it, paying for it in gold. Thus it came about that the

NOW, GIRLS IF YOU WANT TO BE HETTY GREEN'S DAUGHTER -IN-LAW-

THEN-- Curb That Alimony Eye, Don't Have a Divorce Rebate in Your Heart, Don't Be a Bachelor Maid or a Professional Girl, Don't Paint, Don't Powder, Be Bashful, But--Not TOO Bashful!

Lillian Russell Whose Style of Beauty Colonel Green Thinks Too "Gaudy."

HETTY GREEN is the richest woman in the world.

When she dies, her son Colonel Green, will be very nearly the richest man in the world.

And Colonel Green wants to get married. Furthermore, he has not yet picked the girl.

A little over a year ago the Colonel came to New York from Texas to take charge of his mother's affairs. From time to time he has hinted that if only the right girl came along he would be willing.

He has been frank in saying that he hasn't seen any in New York that quite filled the bill—but no doubt there are many he has not seen.

But never would he be pinned down to indicate just what kind of a girl he DID want to share his millions.

Now he's done it. Here for the first time Hetty Green's son tells just what kind of a girl he wants and just what kind he doesn't want.

Ponder over this, ladies. The field is open!

By Col. E. H. R. Green

I AM willing to marry.

I will go farther than that and say I am anxious to be married.

The only reason I haven't been a happy husband and father for twenty years is that I am a very busy man and the girls I would have been willing to marry were too bashful to help me in the courting. I've never been engaged. I've never even been in love.

I should prefer that she were comely, and I shouldn't want her to be deformed; but further than that I don't care much about her looks.

She may be fair or dark. She may be short or tall. The size doesn't make much difference, though.

I, being in height six feet three inches and in weight close to three hundred, will probably acquire a human bangle.

I have said when in talkative mood to other men that I would like my wife to be the most beautiful woman in the world, and so I would, but the chumps chose to misunderstand me. I meant that she would seem the most beautiful woman in the world to me.

Take the two women that are known to us as the most beautiful women in America. Lenbach, the great portrait painter, said that of Maxine Elliott, I know; but the other evening a half dozen men friends of mine and myself were talking of her, and each one in the group entirely agreed that she is not beautiful. She lacks attractiveness, magnetism. Not one of that group of representative men would have married her if he could. I am of the same mind with them. The other is Lillian Russell. Miss Russell is not beautiful. She is gaudy. She is like a showy piece of wall paper, with big, highly colored garish flowers. At first when you see that paper you think, "How handsome!" But in a short while you get tired of it.

You want to take it down and put up another gaudy paper, which may be the reason that all the famous

And Maxine Elliot Whom Hetty Green's Son Thinks Not Magnetic Enough.

This Is the Girl for Me

"I want a bashful girl," Says Col. Green.

By Col. E. H. R. Green

THE woman who calls herself a progressive makes me tired.

No sensible man starts out on the matrimonial trip with a divorce rebate in his mind.

Learn to recognize the alimony eye—I can tell it every time.

I want a bashful girl who has grit enough to help me along in my courting. I'm busy.

I'm not looking for an angel—angels don't walk around in hobble skirts.

New York is short on angels, anyway—but it's long on milliners and tailors' dummies.

After a man's waited an hour for a woman to put on an extra coat of powder and to decorate herself with red paint, she doesn't look HALF so good to him.

I don't care if she hasn't a dollar.

I don't care how she looks or how old she is.

I wouldn't have Maxine Elliott because she hasn't any magnetism.

I wouldn't have Lillian Russell because she's too gaudy.

I wouldn't have a professional or business girl because she's had too many bumps from the world.

I wouldn't have a bachelor maid, but I would have an old maid or a widow.

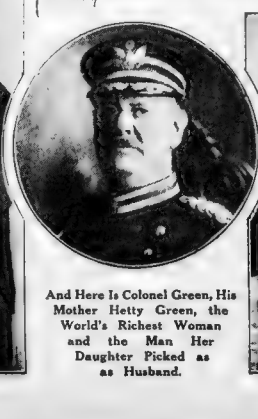
I don't expect to please my mother—no man can with a wife.

I want a bashful girl, but she must meet me half way, for I am busy.

I want at least two children, a boy and a girl.

We can have a circus wedding if she wishes, and I'll be the clown. All bridegrooms are.

We'll live wherever and however she likes and she'll be the queen.



And Here Is Colonel Green, His Mother Hetty Green, the World's Richest Woman and the Man Her Daughter Picked as as Husband.

One type I would [illegible] the motherly woman. I [illegible] instinct shines in the eyes of girls, even in their ex[illegible]. They show it in the [illegible] of the comfort and ha[illegible] bage about them. I don't [illegible] you could fool me on that [illegible]. My eyes have never been [illegible] of friends and my mind [illegible] I [illegible] nor anything to fail to see that [illegible] it exists.

I should want to have at least two children. I don't quarrel with the Roosevelt number, four, but the two I mention are the minimum. I very fancy would have a boy and a girl. That is natural and right—one child to carry forward into [illegible] the traits of one parent, the other to do the same for the [illegible]. Perhaps whose qualities a [illegible] worth perpetuating shouldn't be at [illegible] to marry.

I like a bashful girl. Every girl I have ever admired has been one. I have said [illegible] again I [illegible] what [illegible] it changed [illegible]. And I have found out that [illegible] changed [illegible] time she [illegible] word [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Here's the New Fall Hat

"The Quaker Girl," soon to be transplanted to America. It set all Paris talking and has created what they call now "The Quaker Mode." It will be one of the peculiar types of the coming season's dress. The tunic and the whole Empire look is what makes it new.

The Empire wreathes in the dress I show were worked in brilliants and the skirt was strewn with the same brilliants. The tunic is of blue, also embroidered in diamond leaves. The sash and girdle are of emerald green chiffon, also embroidered.

The whole effect was dazzling and wonderful. Naturally, the cost of such a gown was rather enormous, but the same style can be used with simpler embroidery. I wish to call particular attention to the treatment of the high girdle around the tunic.

And now I have another and rather startling piece of news for you—nothing less than the return of the white cotton stocking, which for some long time has been relegated to oblivion, not to say contumely, together with its once inseparable companion, the elastic side boot! Now, however, it comes back, so proudly assured of its firm and fashionable position that it actually dares to flaunt itself in the full glare of the footlights, and in attractive not to say startling, contrast with a satin shoe of black antelope! Pretty Miss Kate Cutler—once of musical comedy fame, but now an equal success in the more strenuous drama—can claim the credit of being one of the first to display these new combinations of footwear during the impersonation of the much-tried heroine in the St. James's production of "The Witness for the Defence." That the stockings are cotton (not silk) is made obvious by their effect of solid, instead of transparent, whiteness; and, indeed, the said cotton hosiery can be just as costly as silk.

"SKYSCRAPERS," they call them, and indeed that is what they are. Not that I like them for I don't, but as the mode appear in all kinds of heights and widths and shapes, I must tell you about them.

I am speaking, of course, of one of the new Fall and Winter hats. They call it in the skyscrapers because they look so much like real American invention. As a matter of fact though, they go back to the Middle Ages when the ladies of England and France wore towering conical structures of all kinds of fabrics upon their dainty little heads.

Pheasants' and cock feathers are being much used upon these "creations," although I have seen some look like the Eiffel Tower covered with climbing gardens. Of course a number of women will wear these hats whether the hats enhance their beauty or not.

Here is a dainty little dress which I have made for Phyllis Dare, the English actress, which she wore in

Is the East Losing Its "Fine Art" of Torture?

By Hassan-ul-Mulk,

Executioner Under the Former Shah of Persia.

His Unusual Viewpoint Upon Punishment Translated from La Revue, of Paris.

ALL the poetry of legally doing our fellow-man to death is vanishing—lost is the fine art of torture by fire, by water, by the slicing knife, by boiling oil or pitch or lead—even in the ultra-refined Orient.

The new government of the Young Turks has found passages in the Koran which do not conflict with the use of the crude Occidental gallows, and by that method—clumsily, for lack of practice—they are now executing their criminals from Constantinople to Damascus—where ever the rule of the Sultan prevails.

Japan, too, has imported the gallows as a means of capital punishment. Only in the remote districts of China, India and Persia, of the important countries of the Orient, are the ancient, subtle refinements of capital punishment still practised.

Recently in the city of Damascus—that cradle of good breeding, courtesy and fine manners—several rebels were vulgarly done to death by hanging. Imagine their indignation on learning how they were to be jerked into eternity between two breaths, instead of serving as living illustrations, hour after hour, for a gala, of fatal, but refined cruelty!

Can anything be more vulgar, less poetic, refined, dignified than to be dangled, living and dead, all in one instant, at the end of a common hempen rope?

With the adoption of the gallows, too, the Orientals have borrowed our brusque, discourteous manner of hurrying the victim to his doom. Instead of politely requesting him to mount the gibbet quite at his leisure and adjust the fatal noose comfortably to his own neck, they hustle him thither in the hands of rude minions and get the job over with brutal New Jersey celerity.

What heresy! No more silken cords sent to high offenders, with a courteous request to make a close-fitting cravat of it without undue delay. No more gifts of sweetmeats from the Sultan's own table to a "Valued friend," carefully and subtly poisoned en route by royal instructions. No more presents of dark-eyed beauties from the royal harem, the same being ordered to follow caresses with prussic acid.

And for plebian offenders, no more poetic draughts of melted lead, no more picturesque elevations on the ends of sharp-pointed stakes—nothing to look forward to but the vulgar gallows—with probably the unpoetic scientific electric chair in prospect.

What an art to be lost—that of killing a man by inches, each inch a death in itself, and yet in a way so refined that he literally, through long hours, watches himself die! What an art to be able with a long, sharp knife to slice a human being's exterior, as one peels a potato, lopping off one at a time, the two ears, the nose, the two lips, the two arms and the two legs, and then, before he glides into merciful, eternal slumber from the loss of blood, to let him behold with conscious eye the white-hot iron that is slowly pressed through his breast into his heart!

It was one of the minor poets of death torture who devised the scheme of skinning the victim in such a leisurely manner that the spectacle could be prolonged for days before the arrival of death put an end to the enjoyment of either culprit or spectators. Any one might have bought of that. Still the punishment was poetic and refined compared with hanging.

Some of the early Khalifs under Islamism were really Shakespeares and Miltons of poetic torture. Their favorite epic of this sort was to rub salt into the body of the condemned and then fasten split reeds so tightly about the naked, salted trunk that they sank into the skin, becoming joined to the flesh by the action of the salt.

Care was taken not to bind the reeds so tightly as to cause unconsciousness in the victim, for the real poetry of the torture lay in the last act, which consisted in untying the reeds, one at a time, and drawing them slowly out of the inflamed grooves they had made in the flesh. A real artist at this task was so expert that only with the drawing out of the last reed did the culprit give up the ghost.

Tickling the soles of the feet hour after hour until the condemned died in horrible convulsions was almost childlike in its simplicity compared with the poetic stroke of genius which brought forth the classical long-drawn-out death torture of successive drops of water from a [illegible] on the victim's shaven skull. Few ancient Oriental punishments were more dreaded [illegible] this or witnessed with greater satisfaction by connoisseurs.

Impalement on a sharp stake was deemed by the crude and unpoetic until a born artist at the business, having studied the anatomy involved, was able to exhibit the still living victim in that situation for a whole day and night. Then, if the victim were unduly tough, or the executioner's skill too consummate, a drink of water, producing speedy hemorrhage concluded the ceremony.

The genuinely poetic Chinese are still wedded to a sort of protracted death that involves no shedding of the culprit's blood. He is placed upright in a narrow cage a foot or more taller than himself, whose top is a sort of collar upon which his chin and the base of his skull rest. Under his feet are several blocks which, in the beginning of the torture, prevent his neck from bearing the whole weight of his body.

After a prescribed interval one block is withdrawn. Now the victim has to stand on the balls of his feet to relieve his stretched neck. The spectators grow interested. After a few hours another block is withdrawn, compelling the condemned to stand on his toe-tips to save his neck. The removal of the third block obliges the neck muscles to support the whole body. The rest is a matter of endurance—and speculation on the part of interested observers.

A hundred deaths—and there are a hundred separate entrances into Paradise—lay in the refined torture of the boiling pitch. Owing to its adhesive qualities, its rosy consistency and its property of retaining heat, pitch lent itself admirably to the purposes of poetic torture.

Tying by his bound hands above the cauldron the victim was lowered until the soles of his feet rested in the scalding, viscid substance. Then he was drawn up to sizzle moderately for a few minutes. Another lowering extended the treatment to his ankles, another to the calves, and so on, so that continuously some part of him was always either dead, dying or suffering all the pangs of the cruelest death. The executioner-artist who could keep him conscious until the boiling pitch reached well up his body, had the favor of Princes.

These are only a few of the old poetic and refined methods of capital punishment which are becoming a lost art even in the Orient, owing to the onward march of the crudely practical gallows.

HOW SOME PRINCES TREAT THEIR WIVES

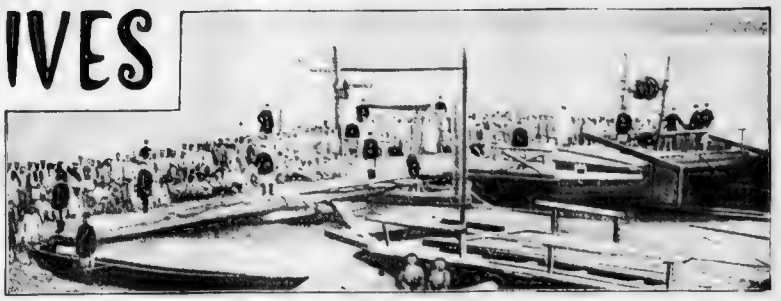
Weighing Women Convict's Burdens at a Station at Wilonisk, in Siberia.



A Convoy of Convicts Returning From Siberia Waiting to Cross the Volga River. With Such the Princess Galitzin is Tramping

Beautiful Princess Galitzin, Tramping from Siberia With Convicts in Obedience to a Caprice of Her Husband; Another Princess Bound Upon a Freight Car; Another Nailed to a Raft and Set Adrift!

"This Russian Prince nailed his wife to a raft, tied her baby to the mast and set them adrift on the Black Sea."

St. Petersburg, August 13.

ROYAL and noble husbands in Russia and many parts of Europe still enjoy the ancient feudal right of beating their wives and disciplining them in any way that may seem fit.

The Russian Princess Xenia Alexandrovna Galitzin, a beautiful and delicate woman, is now, by order of her husband, Prince Galitzin, on a march of eleven hundred miles, from Kurgan, in Siberia, to Moscow.

The returning convoy of convicts, of which Her Highness is part, consists of some four hundred persons, men, women and children. They expect to cover the long and weary route in about three months.

For it is the Russian law that the wife must follow the husband wherever he pleases to go on Russian soil. This statute the Czar himself cannot set aside or circumvent in favor in any woman, high or low.

Six weeks ago Prince and Princess Galitzin had a quarrel.

"I will leave you," said Xenia Alexandrovna.

"If you even make the attempt, I will slit your nose," replied her husband, who is a brute of the first order.

"The time when Russian husbands dared mutilate their wives is past," saidXenia Alexandrovna haughtily; "use the knife on me and to Siberia you go."

That same night she fled to Kharkof, half way between Moscow and Odessa. There she was located by the Prince within a week and he wrote her a letter, couched in loving terms, inviting her to return at once, saying that the separation from her almost killed him. The wife answered by a missive full of scorn and bitterness—and this, together with a copy of his own letter, the Prince submitted to the police.

"Bring back my disobedient wife," he demanded of them.

The Kharkof chief did his utmost to persuade the Princess to go back voluntarily. She said she would "rather die than see that brute's face again."

The Princess's defiance of his authority was promptly used as a club by her husband. He invoked the law and had the Princess marched back to Moscow by convicts' convoy, or "etape," as it is called here. Then, having beaten her, he locked her in a two-room apartment with barred windows, placed a guard at the door and took himself off to Kurgan, in Siberia. From there he wrote another letter of invitation. More scorn and defiance on the lady's part followed. Presto! the police sent her hurrying to her lord's side by the Siberian railway, watching her closely en route. And now, Prince Galitzin, having sent a formal demand from Moscow, she is walking again toward him.

Russia pays ordinary convicts who have finished their term 5 cents a day while they are marching back home, and as they cannot subsist on that pittance provides Cossacks to prevent crime by the ex-prisoners. The marching parties are obliged to make 320 miles per month, allowing twenty-four hours' rest every third day.

This woman, who used to bathe in champagne and asses' milk, must live for three months on coarse black bread and buckwheat soup, and except when the marching party passes a river cannot even aspire to wash her face and hands.

Her nights, formerly spent in palaces, she has to spend in wayside prisons en route to Moscow, horrible dens, in which forty square feet afford sleeping room for two grown persons, not counting the children. Think of this delicate princess finding for a place with some burly peasant woman or cobbler's wife on the sleeping benches, or perhaps forced to sleep on the floor, without pillow, blankets or bedclothing of any kind! The prisons are always horribly overcrowded, while their foul and poisonous air breeds fevers and fearfully high mortality.

Equally outrageous cases of cruelty to Russian wives by their husbands have occurred before. Prince Peter Strashnitz made his wife, the Princess Olga, engage in a weird Mazeppa ride, the steed being a jolting freight car. Prince Peter is a member of the royal family of Montenegro and was an honorary colonel of the Imperial Chevalier Guards, the Czarina's bodyguard. Forty years older than Olga, he compels her to live the greater part of the year on his vast estates in the Caucasus, as his duty compels him to spend certain seasons in St. Petersburg.

Two years ago, while in the capital, he learned that Olga, unable longer to stand his maltreatment, had accepted the protection of a brother officer, Count Paul Dobrina. On a certain night they had arranged to run away on the St. Petersburg-Moscow express bound for the German frontier.

Thereupon Prince Peter invited Count Dobrina to visit him at his country house, and while at dinner had him seized by the servants and carried off to the cellar, gagged and bound.

At the same time the Prince seized his wife to be seized by her retinue of maids and undressed. Several great crocks of honey were emptied over her naked body, she was rolled in feathers and finally sewed up to the neck in a strong canvas bag, secured with stout ropes and a gag placed in her mouth.

A closed carriage brought the Princess, more helpless than a baby, and her husband's "trunkies" to the freight yard. When night came [illegible] bound the wife fast to the rest of the [illegible] sail [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] this [illegible]

Your Lesson in Health—No. 4.

The Venus Twirl, Which Originated from Her Study of the Same Venus's Mutilated Torso.

The Venus Whirl, an Exercise for Health Evolved by Mlle. Baldini from study of the Venus de Milo's Legs.

The Unique Exercises Which Mlle. Baldini, a Star of the Russian Dancers, Evolved from Study of the Famous Venus de Milo

MLLE. MARIA BALDINI is the premiere danseuse of the Imperial Theatre, St. Petersburg, Russia. Like all the Russian dancers she is a member of the Czar's own troupe. [illegible] the favorites of the Czarina. Mlle Baldini, besides having been educated in the traditional exercises of the Russian dancers, which [illegible] are strongly Greek, has evolved a unique series of poses, [illegible] for her own intimate use.

These are especially Grecian and were suggested by the world famous and armless Venus de Milo. Mlle. Baldini, like most artists, felt that Venus held in her marble curves the essence of grace. She began to imagine how this grace was gained, and so she evolved the unique system of exercises, of which two are illustrated on this page.

Mlle. Baldini's article is the fourth of the series written by the Russian dancers now at the Winter Garden, New York, and published by permission of Gertrude Hoffmann, Morris Gest and F. Ray Comstock.

By Mlle. Maria Baldini

Premier Danseuse, Imperial Theatre, Moscow.

WHY do thousands of visitors crowd the Louvre in Paris every week? It is to see that exquisite marble figure shining out of the dusk at one end of the corridor, the statue of the Venus de Milo.

When I was in Paris I went every day to drink my fill of the beauty and grace of this great work of art so imbued with humanity that I have fancied I could see its bosom heave, its nostrils inflate with the breath of life.

At the Imperial Ballet School in St Petersburg I had received inspiration in dancing. From the [illegible] figure of the dim gallery of the Louvre I received my inspiration for dancing.

The problem of the severed arms fascinated me. For hours I dreamed of the possibilities of grace were those arms restored and in motion. And I thought of what those beautiful glistening feet might do if they were endowed with [illegible]

I talked to one of the [illegible] teachers, Theodore Kossoff [illegible] reflections and [illegible] postures of the feet as the Venus Whirl, the movement of the arms as the Venus Twirl.

Every day I practise the six exercises, evolved from my studies of the famous and enchanting statue. Gladly I describe them to you, hoping they will be of value to the American women who wish to develop the [illegible]

Exercise Number One is the first of the [illegible] which has been classed as the Venus Twirl. It consists in holding the body exactly in the attitude of the Milo Venus, inasmuch that its loveliness had been [illegible] by the restoration of the [illegible] evenly divided upon the balls of the feet, I raise the right arm, curving it inward toward the head, the hand drooping, with fingers apart, about two inches from the hair. The left arm, held close to the side, is bent at the elbow and the forearm raised, the hand bent backward with open palm upward near the chin.

Exercise Number Two is an admirable aid in deep breathing. Also it strengthens the back, gives the body poise and teaches control of the arms. Its first essential is to raise the chest and fill the lungs with fresh air by a long, deep breath.

The head should be held back so that it rests upon the shoulders. The arms should be raised, with the elbows unbent and the hands held twice the width of the shoulders apart. The arms should be raised and lowered thus by a slow, sail-like motion, inhaling the breath as you raise the arms, holding the air in the lungs as you hold the arms overhead, deflating the lungs as you slowly lower the arms.

The last of the trio, the Venus Twirl, is a falling backward and a recovery of one's self. Hold the arms at the sides with elbows unbent, and the hands twice the width of the hips apart. Turn the palms outward and slowly bend the shoulders back until the face is turned toward the ceiling. I hold this position during four counts, then slowly raise the head and shoulders until the body is in an upright position. Repeat this exercise until dizziness interferes.

The Venus Whirl is a series of three exercises in balancing the entire weight of the body on one foot.

Exercise Number Four is the simplest of the three. The body rests its weight on the ball of the right foot. Bending the left knee raise the left leg slowly until the foot is opposite the right knee. Hold this posture as long as you can do so steadily, then slowly lower the foot to the floor and lift the right leg in the same way.

Exercise Number Five is more difficult, but is of still greater value in training the body to poise. Contrive to let the weight rest on the great toe of the right foot. Raise the left foot until it is on a level with the waist line.

Exercise Number Six consist in resting the weight upon the toes of the right foot. Gradually raise the right foot, bending the knees until the ankle of the right foot is opposite the inner part of the knee of the left leg.

The photograph of myself you see on this page shows my own method of resting. A dancer's legs and feet, being so much exercised, are over-supplied with blood. The excess of blood is drawn from the vital organs—the heart, the lungs and even the brain. I rest on my shoulders, in the sleeping posture of the bat, in order to empty my legs of this excess of blood, restoring the rightful amount to the head and heart. I advise a similar form of rest for golf players, for saleswomen, for any persons who walk or stand much. My attitude, shown in the picture is extreme and is adapted to my particular needs. I do not advise such a radical posture for others, but I do counsel women to rest on their backs, with their legs resting against the foot of the bed

Queer Crabs and Lobsters to Add to Our Foods

The Porto Rico Land Crab, Which Has One Giant Claw.

IN spite of the efforts of the Fisheries Department at Washington, the highly esteemed lobster grows scarcer and higher in price. Accordingly the Government is cultivating other varieties of [illegible] and informing the public of their excellent food qualities.

Most people are familiar with the little shrimp, so useful in the making of salads and sauces. It can be made a very satisfactory substitute for the lobster. The shrimp is exceedingly prolific all along the Atlantic coast from Labrador to North Carolina. A considerably larger variety is found along the coast of the Gulf States, and along the Pacific Coast a variety that attains a length of three and a half inches is exceedingly numerous, supplying the local markets abundantly and [illegible] and dried—is exported in large quantities to China.

Perhaps the most popular substitute for the lobster is the crab, soft crabs and "hard backs" being shipped daily from Chesapeake Bay and other fisheries all over the country, oysters being canned by millions yearly.

Deep Japanese waters furnish the largest crab in the world, its [illegible] attaining a reach of [illegible]

[illegible] a variety of the [illegible] in abundance which is nearly identical with the North Atlantic lobster, except that it has no large claws. In their place are two long antennæ covered with horny spikes. From these the crustacean takes its name—the "spiny" lobster.

It is thought that popular acquaintance with its absence of claws would enable it to be shipped to the North in its natural state to help eke out the waning lobster supply.

Hoop-La! Here's the Society Circus' Mother.

Paris, Aug. 3.

TO get the little white card of invitation to the annual performance of the Molier Circus—truly the mother of society circuses—in the Rue Benouville, is proof positive that one is of the elect in that inner circle of society which is known as "All Paris."

"All Paris" is more exclusive than the famous "Four Hundred" of New York, in spite of its apparently more comprehensive title, for it is essentially that portion of Paris which counts.

You may be the wealthiest person in the world and yet be unable to get the ticket, for Mons. Molier's Circus prides itself on its exclusiveness.

This year, however, instead of two performances, a third has just been given in order to accommodate the spectators who were bidden to the function.

It is undoubtedly the most remarkable circus to be seen in any part of the world, and so far in advance of the occasional entertainments given by the ultra fashionables at Newport. It is the real thing, done by highly trained amateurs, and takes place in a little building adjoining Mons. Molier's house, in the Rue Benouville, in the sixteenth Arrondissement of Paris.

Thirty-one years ago—on March 21, 1882, to be exact—Mons. Molier gave the first performance, merely, as it seemed, to gratify a passing whim. So successful, however, was the entertainment that it was repeated the following year. Since then it has become a matter of such importance that some of the fashionable men and women in Paris have a special aptitude and love for this kind of thing, actually spending long hours every day in learning to do the "stunts" which regular circus artists perform and in inventing others for themselves.

It is a wonderful sight to see, which pours in its automobiles into the Rue Benouville on the nights of the performance. Here are the most distinguished men and the most beautiful women of Paris society, the Prince of This, the Duke of That, the Duchess of Somewhere Else, distinguished editors, famous artists, notable scientists, diplomatists of high renown, great singers from the opera, great actors and actresses from the leading theatres—women whose beauty has won them fame, and others who are no less noted for it—all come crowding into the little circus, with its wooden gallery, to which many a lady has mounted by a ladder.

The ringmaster is [illegible] and are headed by M. Pons Raoul de Pinchemont, the most sought after [illegible] a dozen years and more, who acts as chief secretary of the circus. Among his assistants are the Marquis de Bourdeille, the Comte de Monchy, "the chief groom," the Vicomte de Massounes, the "chief [illegible] who, out of the circus, is [illegible] noted leaders of the cotillon [illegible] Comte G. de Chambrun, Comte Frederic Comte J. de la Fayette, Comte de la Rochefoucauld, Marquis de Layens, the Comte de Montesquiou, the Vicomte de Ramel, Baron Thénard, and other

Mlle. Yola de Nyss is a second of the [illegible] of the Molier circus, and is a member of the most exclusive set in Paris. She set herself to learn to ride and to do gymnastics, in both of which she became so proficient that her skill was recognized by the professionals who have seen her perform.

The clowns were Messrs. Payssé, Decoux, Soubeyran and Vignon, and they never failed to keep the audience in constant roars of laughter by their whimsicalities.

Some wonderful hand balancing was performed by Mons. G. Hebert, a naval officer, and Mlle. Vicart was conspicuous on the trapeze.

Mons. Molier himself, the inspiring genius of the whole entertainment, is a Breton whose family is well known at the bar and in the army.

The Fan Hat; the Ice-Box Hat---What Next?

AN inventor of Birmingham, England, has invented and patented a high silk hat, in which there is an upper compartment containing a small electric fan worked by a storage battery.

There are plenty of holes in the roof, and with the help of the fan the wearer finds his head better ventilated than with any other kind of hat. The responsible business men of Birmingham are supposed to wear high hats to business and have suffered much from the practise in hot weather. This invention solves the difficulty.

Many curious inventions are recorded in the United States Patent Office for securing personal comfort in various ways. For protection against sunstroke an ingenious thinker has provided a hat that contains a little pan filled with cracked ice. Another inventor divides the hat (necessarily of the "stovepipe" pattern) into two compartments, the upper one being opened to receive a lump of ice when the wearer starts out for a walk on a hot day.

Specially adapted for hot weather use is a contrivance called by its originator a fanning cover." An ordinary sheet, placed over the bed, is mounted upon a wire frame, one end of which is attached to the footboard, and the other to a light motor. By simply touching a switch at his side the person occupying the bed causes the sheet to shake up and down at a lively rate, producing a refreshing breeze and frightening away the mosquitoes and flies.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, cools his study in Washington by means of an "ice stove," a device of his own recent contriving. It is simply an insulated box in the ceiling, which is stocked twice a week in Summer with 200 pounds of ice. The cool air, emitted from the box through pipes provided for the purpose, descends, and even on the hottest day will reduce the temperature of the room to any point desired, the flow being regulated by electric fans.

Another genius, anxious to contribute to human comfort, has devised a so-called "lap-robe," which is intended apparently for the benefit of lovers who go sleighing or "buggy riding" in cold climates. It is shaped like a huge shoe, and the man and woman are supposed to lace themselves up together inside of it, thus obtaining the pleasure of mutual contiguity with protection against the severity of the weather.

A Boston woman has invented a private car strap with a hook, to be carried in the shopping bag. By hooking it on to any regulation car strap the hand hold can be brought to a proper height for feminine comfort, for the straps on street cars are fixed at a man's height. If all the straps on the car are occupied by men, the woman provided with one of these little conveniences can hook it directly over the strap rail.

Women are so much interested in the comfort of men that they have devoted an immense amount of time and thought to the inventing and patenting of articles entirely for their benefit. Thus, for example, they have patented several patterns of mustache-guards to prevent that masculine ornament from getting into the soup. Some of these appliances are attached to the mustache by means of wires which pass over the ears and hold them on.

One feminine inventor has an idea which she calls an "improvement in cigars." Her notion is that the tobacco shall be soaked in an extract of pine needles to make its taste less disagreeable. Another thinks that cigars made of eucalyptus leaves would have a much cleaner and more pleasant flavor than horrid tobacco. These leaves may also be used for smoking in pipes, and (the patentee cleverly suggests) they are likewise "good for tooth powder."

My Secrets of Beauty—

No. 138—Housework as a Beautifier

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

"When dusting, the windows must be opened widely and the hair protected by a dust cap."

MME. CAVALIERI, the world's most famous living beauty, tells to-day how the "drudgery" of housework may be converted into a beautifying and health-giving occupation. The woman who heeds Mme. Cavalieri's valuable suggestions will soon realize that housework is really a blessing in disguise and that the woman of leisure is more to be pitied than envied.

"Leaning forward from the hips is an almost tireless posture. The exercise should be wholly of the arms and shoulders."

"Do your washing on the roof, where you escape most of the dust."

"Scrubbing is one of the most valuable exercises for women."

Mme. Cavalieri.

"Sweeping is excellent exercise if the figure is held in the right posture."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

PLAINTIVE letters come to me from women who, like all the rest of their sex, want to be attractive, but who complain that they cannot be comely because, to use their own words, they are "only poor overworked drudges."

Now my dear downcast correspondents, I don't in the least agree with you. I have travelled extensively over the civilized parts of the world.

I have studied the women of the civilized nations, and, as my readers know, whom do you suppose is the most beautiful woman I have ever met? She is a lady whom I met in Ireland. She had what more beautiful women have not—utter unconsciousness of their charms. And she was the daughter of a family that has been born on that fresh little island whence so many beauties come—Ireland. She had the clear blue of its skies in her eyes, the white of its summer clouds in her skin, and Nature had painted her lips, her cheeks with the red of its wild hill heathers. Her features were regular, but I admit that much of beauty to my taste lies in the features. She was tall and her figure was slender, yet exquisitely rounded. She had a fine poise of the head, straight shoulders, and that freedom and grace that comes of moving the body from the hips and keeping the upper part nearly stationary. She had done what many persons we see on London streets have neglected to, taken scrupulous care of her teeth and they were strong, white and even. Her hair in dusky masses simply arranged about her head, and, loosely falling about her forehead, lay in glossy shadows. Her neck, that most important part of the figure now that colorless gowns are universally worn, was round and white and firm as a marble column. I should like to see that girl's beauties perpetuated in canvas. I have spoken to an artist friend of mine about her. If he can be persuaded to leave Paris long enough to visit London, he will, but the Frenchman does not care to travel. He is so well satisfied with his own [illegible]

[illegible] my correspondents? Yes; we admit that [illegible] are [illegible] But we insist. Work breaks the monotony of our youth."

Well, I cannot agree with you. However, if intelligently managed, I do not rob you of your leisure. It develops it. But you must direct it with intelligence, and this direction precludes worry about [illegible]. Do your work well, but cease worry about what cannot be helped.

For instance you know that no one can be beautiful well, and no one is so beautiful without health, who does not secure all the fresh air possible. The ideal is to live out of doors, but since that is not always practicable we should all be out of doors as much as we can. Do you live in a crowded city? Then utilize the roof of your flat house for your health and beauty's sake. Take your work up there. Stretch a sheet or quilt across the clothes lines and sit under its shade if the sun be hot. If the day be cloudy, or if it be early in the morning before the sun is high, or in the evening after the sun is low, the shade is not necessary. You can do most of your housework on the roof. You can peel the potatoes, prepare the strawberries, even clean the fish for dinner, especially if the water pipes extend to the roof as they should in every building that houses many persons. You can do your sewing far up there above the heat of the city streets, where, indeed, the temperature is ten degrees lower, and where you escape most of the dust. You can rock the baby to sleep up there. You would better keep him there as much as you can in these hot days. It may save his life.

Or, if you are fortunate enough to live in less crowded quarters, you may perhaps have a back or side porch. Take your work out there. Keep a work table or work bench there. You can wash and dry your dishes there, mend your table linen there—even do your washing there during the hot months.

Washing, women consider their hardest work. The fact that their backs ache after washday proves to them that the work is too hard for their strength. Perhaps not. It is more likely that when they wash they lean, not from the hips as they should, but from the waist. This is unnatural, strains the muscles and is exhausting. Leaning forward from the hips is an almost tireless posture. The exercise should be wholly of the arms and shoulders. Follow these hints and washing will not be the horror it has become to the housekeeper. She has wasted her strength in a wrong posture and in unnecessary twisting and turning of the upper part of the body. Wear large, loose shoes by all means. Old shoes are friends in this case, as always, but be sure that the heels are not run down. Crooked heels are not mere carelessness. They are a crime against the health. Especially is this true of women, for the run-down heels disturb the balance of the body and shift the vital organs out of place. Do not throw away shoes because the heels are run down. Have them rebuilt by a cobbler in the neighborhood. The price is slight.

Scrubbing and sweeping are classed by housekeepers with washing as the hardest work of the household. Sweeping need not be hard work. It is excellent exercise if the figure is held in the right posture. Again the beading should be done from the hips. Try to think of yourself as a jack-knife, folding together at the hips. Keep your chest high. Do not bend the knees. And be sure to use both hands in sweeping. Of course, you cannot use both hands at the same time in sweeping, but you can use first one, then another. This should be done in every task and exercise as much as possible. If children were taught this there would be neither right-handed nor left-handed persons, but we would all have equal power and skill with both hands. Sweeping skillfully done develops the forearm and shoulder muscles and corrects the weak back and waist of the sweeper.

In fact, I know a woman who reduced her weight by pushing a carpet sweeper for a half hour every morning. Dusting is a valuable exercise for development of the muscles of the back and arms. Bend from the hips and stretch the arms, but not the trunk. I know rich women who paid large sums of money to a lecturer on health and beauty whose specialty was the stretching exercises. These stretching exercises they could have had without expense if they had dusted their own bedrooms and drawing rooms. Need I offer the caution that when sweeping and dusting the windows must be open widely, at top and bottom, and the hair be protected by a dust cap or veil, and that the hands should be protected by old gloves, or large, loose rubber gloves?

Wear your corsets while at work, if you are stout, to preserve your figure. But do not wear them as tight as usual.

Scrubbing is one of the most valuable exercises for women. Nearly every muscle of the body is active during this form of housework. Scrubwomen are nearly always healthy. And an observant friend of mine told me they were happy, and happy because healthy. She deduced this from the fact that nearly all of them sing at their work. The skilful scrubwoman who, as you say forcefully and often in America, which I have often called the land of pointed speech, "knows her business," is careful of her posture while scrubbing. She does not "hunch up" the body at her work. She keeps all of the body above the knees as straight as she can and scrubs with a long, free, vigorous stroke of the arms.

While ironing and while preparing your meals, at the work table or the cook stove, or while setting the table, stand with your weight upon the balls of your feet. Keep the only normal and graceful posture, chest high and abdomen straight, and back straight.

Sewing will greatly tax the strength and form unlovely habits unless you are careful about the posture of your body. If you are at the machine don't lean over as a near-sighted child does at its desk. Keep the shoulders even and the chest high and always bend, not from the waist, but the hips. If you are sewing by hand sit in a comfortable chair. A straight-backed one is best, for it will not allow you to shift into ungraceful and unhealthful attitudes. Rest the back against the back of the chair and be sure that your feet have a support. If they cannot be planted firmly upon the floor use a hassock to support them. If the legs grow weary stretch them out on another chair of the same height as the chair on which you are sitting until they are rested. Don't bend forward at the shoulders. This contracts the lung space, which is the reason why so many seamstresses are afflicted with lung trouble. If you are tired, going to the window and drawing deep breaths of fresh air or taking a few turns around the room will rest you so that you will not feel like crouching with one shoulder higher than the other to "rest."

Above all, don't, I beg you, lose a chance to inhale deep draughts of fresh air. Do this when you place the bedclothes on the window sill for their airing and when you turn the mattress. Do it when you make the bed, which is an excellent stretching exercise for many muscles. Do it when you are hanging up the clothes, which is another good stretching exercise, but be sure in this instance to stretch only with the arms. Stand on a stool or box if you are not tall enough to reach the line. The intestines are not included in the directions to stretch. That applies only to the muscles.

If you have this airing and bending develops the muscles and those of the shoulders.

No matter how busy you are, you are not too busy to drink plenty of cool (not ice) water between meals, sip, don't gulp it. Water drinking should be a slow process because the water should have plenty of time to warm going down before it reaches the delicate stomach. Ten glasses of water a day at least are needed to eliminate the fast accumulation poisons in the body.

M. W. writes: Will you please send me the address of a place where face enamelling is done? No, for I do not approve of it. I suppose you have read the story of the boy who was covered with gold leaf to adorn a procession in Europe and who died a few hours afterwards because his pores had been closed? I trust you are of that class to whom a hint is sufficient.

F. H. writes: "Can you tell me whether there is any cure for acne? My face has been disfigured by these ugly blemishes for ten years."

You will pardon me, my dear Miss F. H., if I say that the best cure, as the best preventive of acne, is to keep the face clean. Blackheads are specks of dust that have entrenched themselves in the pores, mixed with the natural oil and become fixtures.

They must be dislodged with care else they will leave enlarged pores which are an unsightly as the acne. Steam the face by holding it over a bowl of hot water, covering head and bowl with a large towel to keep in the steam. This relaxes the skin. Then scrub the parts affected with a complexion brush dipped into liquid green soap. This should dislodge them all. Afterwards anoint the affected parts of the face with cold cream. If the first treatment is not entirely successful, repeat it several times until the blackheads have all been removed. Then do not allow them to return.

Freckles

Don't Worry About Them. You Needn't Keep Them. Get This Simple Remedy—It's Guaranteed.

Freckles, like facts, are stubborn things, but unlike facts, are easily removed. The more stubborn your freckles the more promptly should you get a package of Kintho. Get it wherever toilet goods are sold. If Kintho fails, get your money back. It's so simple and sure you'll almost think it's magical.

Use Kintho Soap, too. It will not only help give the freckles a push, but it is delightful for toilet use.

Lady "Angy" Wondering What She'll Do Next.

dered suitable for the young person. Nevertheless there are many readers who consider that it discusses some delicate problems in an interesting way.

Lady Angela is always doing interesting things, and the latest question in society is, "What will she do next?" She smokes and wears the very latest and most striking Paris clothes and says witty and audacious things.

She went into trade a few years ago when there was a craze among the titled people for that sort of [illegible]. She opened a flower market in Portman Square and put out a big sign reading "My Shop." It flourished and a big business was done, but Lady Angela soon tired of it and then she wrote her book.

It is the kind of book that is devoured in Mayfair. The title alone would attract the easier eye of a reader. The book is dedicated: "To those who caused and to those who helped me through a dark hour."

On the next leaf are Longfellow's lines:

For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem."

Our good poet probably never dreamed that he would be interpreted as Lady Angy has interpreted him.

The nature of the story is indicated straight through by the poetic quotations heading the chapters. They begin with this from John Selden: "Marriage is a desperate thing."

Lady Angy's latest move to drive away ennui is the breeding of white West Highland terriers. She has a big kennel of them and has her dogs advertised on sale. She loves the country as well as the city. She has a stable full of fine horses and is a hard and straight rider to hounds. She looks like a young girl in spite of the fact that she is now forty and has been through the divorce mill.

She has very pronounced ideas like her sister, the Countess of Warwick and Duchess of Sutherland. For instance, she is sending her children [illegible] to [illegible] schools and lets them play with the humble little children of the butcher and baker and [illegible] stick maker.

She is a suffragette, a Socialist and an all-round sport, in fact, she is the "new woman" [illegible]. Twenty years ago she would have taken [illegible] breath away with her daring. Even in these days society finds her rather out of the common.

Everybody is deeply interested in her, and society [illegible] with more or less [illegible] what she will do next. Something [illegible] coming. She must go on and no sooner has she done [illegible] thing than she is looking for something else [illegible]

Madame Rostand's Success Recipes--a New One for Every Lucky Hit

EDMOND ROSTAND'S fame as a playwright bids fair to be eclipsed by his wife's growing reputation as a cook. Mme. Rostand's culinary accomplishments have until recently been kept in dark secret and the recipes given on this page are now published for the first time.

Curiously enough, whenever the great French playwright has written a new drama his talented wife has been inspired to invent a new dish, but while the husband's genius has been proclaimed by the whole world, the wife's achievement has been recognized only in her own household.

Mme. Rostand, who is a poetess and one of the most cultivated women in Europe, loves cooking almost as much as her husband loves writing. At Arnaga, the sumptuous estate of the Rostands at Cambo, in the Basses-Pyrenees, she spends many an enchanted hour among pots and pans, enveloped from head to foot in white linen, with a jaunty chef's cap of linen on her head.

Mme. Rostand's new dishes are always named after her husband's new plays or characters. There are in Madame's red morocco cook book [illegible] delightful dishes to the following names: "Carrots a la Cyrano," "Chicken Livers a la Chantecler," "Peach Souffle a la Roxane," "Fromage Romanesque," "Eggs a l'Aiglon" and "Liver a la Hen Pheasant."

These are some of the secret recipes, and to prove how delicate is the secret art of the lovely Mme. Rostand one only to try them to see. But even when made with the greatest care after the receipts they will not taste quite like the same thing made by Madame, for there is a something about French cooking—an indefinable, elusive, wonderful little knack—that no one else in the world can get who hasn't French blood in his or her veins, for French people are born with the culinary sense in every fiber of understanding and both peasant and nobleman alike seem to be endowed with a perfectly natural cooking instinct.

This is the way she makes "Carrots a la Cyrano." But first understand, if you don't already know that carrots are a highly honored vegetable in Paris, while in this country they are somewhat despised and looked upon as only fit for the poor man's table or to be put in stews and soups. But in France more carrots are sold than any other vegetable, so that "Carrots a la Cyrano" is a very dainty dish according to French ideas.

To make the dish, the tender young sweet carrots are used. These are scraped and boiled tender. Then they are cut lengthwise, dipped in thickest honey and placed in a baking dish with the bottom thinly covered with oil. They are then thickly sprinkled with grated cheese and salt and placed in a hot oven and browned over for perhaps fifteen minutes.

"Chicken Livers a la Chantecler" is a more ambitious dish and is a delicious concoction of big Italian chestnuts and chicken livers. Season up temptingly with olive oil and seasoning.

To make it the big chestnuts are shelled and boiled tender, but not to the degree of crumbling. The chicken livers are drained and fried brown in olive oil and then placed in a casserole, with just sufficient chicken stock to keep them from burning, with the chestnuts dipped in olive oil and placed over the chicken livers, with dabs of butter here and there. The casserole is cooked from fifteen to twenty minutes, and then served very hot, with fried apples in oil.

"Peach Souffle a la Roxane" is a very delicious concoction for which are required six very ripe cling peaches, six eggs, half a pint of thick cream, half a pound of fresh marshmallows, one large [illegible] very ripe red banana and the juice of one very sweet orange. The peaches are peeled and sliced and then mashed to a pulp with a fork. Then the banana is peeled and scraped and crushed in with the peaches and the juice of the orange blended into the whole. Beat the six eggs with the whites and yolks separate. Then add the [illegible] yolks to the fruit pulp, beating thoroughly, and place in a porcelain saucepan. Cook over a slow fire until it puffs up high, then stir in the cream, and when thoroughly blended through again add the marshmallows whole, and when heated add last of all the very stiffly beaten whites of the eggs.

This marvellous souffle is eaten with whipped or clotted cream.

"Fromage Romanesque" is enough to make an epicure's mouth water. It is as delicious a cheese dish as one could imagine.

The cheese used in its making is the common cream or Neuchatel variety and two of the second sized cakes are used for this receipt—that is, the size we call the ten cent size in this country. The other ingredients are three eggs, three quarters of a cup of very thick, sour cream, five teaspoonfuls of clear honey and half a teaspoonful of salt. First, beat the cheese and sour cream together until smooth as paste; then add the honey and blend in carefully, then the salt, then the well beaten yolks of the three eggs, and lastly the whites beaten stiffly. Beat the whole mixture vigorously for a few minutes and then either pour into cases of thin pure paste and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven or bake in an [illegible] dish [illegible] with [illegible] Serve with [illegible]

Eggs a l'Aiglon" is a tempting dish. It might have been called eggs a la bon marchand [illegible] To those who wish to [illegible] the eggs are boiled hard as many as one wants. Then are they [illegible] in halves, the yolks [illegible] and a little ripe cream [illegible] and to make the halves stand [illegible]

Then a stuffing is made from a boiled pepper, chopped fine and mixed in a bowl that has been rubbed hard with garlic. This mixture is mixed very fine [illegible] with the pepper and the yolks of the eggs have been mashed with a little olive oil and blended in [illegible] with a generous [illegible] of mustard and a [illegible] celery [illegible]

[illegible] are [illegible] and [illegible] with [illegible] grated [illegible] and [illegible] placed in a hot oven for about ten minutes. They are served with a garnish of watercress.

"Liver a la Hen Pheasant" is a very [illegible] dish. To prepare it a calf's liver is required. Have it delicately sliced and stabbed with half a dozen [illegible] It is then smeared thickly in mustard and then dusted over with browned flour and salt. It is placed in a baking dish with some [illegible] on the juice of half a lemon, one fine y minced onion, salt, pepper and half a cup of water. It is baked two hours and is basted frequently. If the water and oil evaporate from the baking dish before the liver is done add more water and oil.

This is served hot, with a sauce made of sweet peppers, chopped fine, and the gravy of the liver, thickened with browned rice flour.

The Splendid Baby Book—FREE

How can an expectant mother put herself in the best physical condition for baby's coming?
How can she make the layette most serviceable?
How shall the accouchement chamber be prepared?

Baby's coming is an event, and the preparations cannot be too embracing and complete. There are literally hundreds of such questions—questions that every mother has faced and has puzzled over. Baby's whole future may depend on her ability to solve them right.

"The New Baby" is the title of a practical guide for expectant mothers. It is written by such well known physicians as Thos. M. Achen, M. D., Wm. L. Stowell, M. D., and Stephen O. Storck, D.D.S. They tell the proper diet, exercises and clothing for the mother, the feeding and hygiene that baby needs, etc., etc. One interesting chapter is entitled "Schedule Baby's Day for the First Three Months." In another one a prominent maternity nurse tells how to prepare accouchement. The suggestion for the layette, baby's sweaters and utensils, etc., are from one of the largest manufacturers of such articles.

"The New Baby" is not a big and cumbersome volume filled with dry technical terms. It is interesting and simple, and is directly what to do and what not to do. The information author tative. The suggestions are practical. It is a of real value one to which you will refer again and again and this book will be given you—FREE—by
